BOUND WHILE PARENTS GO TO SHOW

While father and stepmother attended theatres this boy, according to charges in court, was tied up and left under the kitchen sink. The parents were held in $600 for alleged abuse of the child. The father said it was "punishment" for playing "hookey" from school.

CHILD TIED IN SINK CLOSET

Father and Stepmother Go to Theatre, Leaving Boy Helpless

George Adams, a scared-faced youngster of eight years, was arraigned before Judge Reeve in Lynn Court today, charged with being a neglected child.

There is no doubt that he is guilty.

George's father, Michael Adams, of No. 23A Laconia court, Lynn, and his wife, who is George's stepmother, liked to go to the movies. When they went, they found it necessary to see that little George did not get into any mischief.

So they adopted a simple expedient.

They hog-tied George.

They bound his hands together, then his feet, then they tied hands and feet together. Thus tied and rolled into a ball, George would be shoved into a small closet under the kitchen sink. There he would remain for hours, until his parents returned from the movies, discussing the film they had seen.

This came to the attention of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, through complaints of neighbors. Miss Jenny M. Purchase, agent of the society, investigated and discovered that the hog-tying of the boy was a frequent occurrence.

When the police, led by Miss Purchase, arrived at the Adams home this morning they found that George had just been released from his prison under the kitchen sink. There were great welts on the lad's wrists and ankles where the ropes had bitten.

In court Adams denied that he hog-tied his son in order to go to the movies. It was punishment for offences committed, he told Judge Reeve.

He said that George had taken some change from his stepmother's purse and frequently played hookey from school.

The father is charged with neglect of a minor child.

Mrs. Adams, who was charged with assault and battery, was held in bail of $500 for a further hearing.

STATE BANS SALE OF "HAYES" STOCK

The State Department of Public Utilities, charged with the enforcement of the Blue Sky Law in Massachusetts, today ordered the Chas. Hart. Inc. to stop the sale of its securities.

The specific reason given for the order is the fact that the company, in which Mrs. Myrtle B. Hayes of Boston was the moving factor, has failed to file reports required by the

BRIGHTWELL, PONZI RIVAL, SENTENCED

Charles M. Brightwell, former president of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, has been sentenced by Judge O'Connell in Superior Court to from three to four years in State prison.

Ever since he was convicted on charges of larceny and conspiracy, nineteen months ago, he has been in the Charles Street Jail in default of bail.

Raymond Myers, another official of the company, who has also been in the Charles Street Jail since his conviction nearly two years ago, was placed on probation.

BLACKJACKED BY 2 WHO GET $34

Two men struck Samuel J. Adams, a watchman, over the head in the front hallway, No. 360 Commonwealth avenue, today and robbed him of $34.

The robbers summoned Adams ostensibly to inquire about one of the tenants. While one talked the other paced up and down the corridor until he came in back of Adams, who was blackjacked.

One of the thieves was six feet in height, about thirty-five, weighed around 180 and wore a brown overcoat. The other was thirty, about five feet eight inches and weighed around 160.

SUGAR CASE GOES TO SUPREME COURT

New York, May 12.—An agreement eliminating a drawn-out attempt by the government to obtain an injunction in Federal District Court, restraining the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange and its clearing association from dealing in futures, was reached today between counsel for the government and the defendants.

David A. L'Esperance, special assistant to Attorney-General Daugherty, announced it had been agreed to treat the affidavits and pleadings on the temporary injunction petition, rejected by the Circuit Court, as though they had been taken in the final hearing of the case.

As a result, he said, the Circuit Court will dismissed the government's petition for a permanent injunction and the way was now clear for the government to appeal the case at once to the United States Supreme Court.

'BEGAN WORLD WAR;' LEAPS TWO STORIES

Providence, May 12 (By International News Service).—In an apparent suicide attempt, Edward J. Mossey, twenty-five, leaped from a second-story window of the Crown Hotel today and was unhurt.

At the Rhode Island Hospital he told physicians he started the World War. They declare he is mentally deranged.

Mossey registered as from Boston, but police say papers in his pockets indicate his home is in Burlington, Vt.

Clad only in night clothing he was seen to poise about a minute on the window ledge before taking his leap. He landed on his feet.

9 INVOLVED IN POISON PEN PLOT

Evidence Against Eight Besides Maxwells Given by 80 Victims of "Ring"

New York, May 12.—Counsel for George Maxwell, indicted in the "Poison Pen" plot, was notified today by District Attorney Banton that unless he guaranteed within forty-eight hours the return of Maxwell from Paris to answer the charges, extradition proceedings would be started next Monday.

New York, May 12.—The Grand Jury which has indicted George Maxwell, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, for sending obscene missives through the mails, has evidence against eight other prominent members of a "poison-pen clique" which is alleged to have victimized 140 wealthy society people here, in Philadelphia, Buffalo, Pittsburgh and other cities, District Attorney Banton disclosed today.

Eighty of the alleged victims already have testified before the grand jury, which is still in session. Mr. Banton revealed that their statements had led to the uncovering of 147 of the poison-pen letters and to the discovery that nine well known families had been broken up, a man and a woman had died shortly after receiving particularly vicious missives and another woman had gone mad.

Maxwell's attorneys here announced that Maxwell, who is in Europe, had cabled a denial of the charges. Maxwell himself had received several of the obscene letters from the alleged clique, said the attorneys. He will hasten home to face his accusers.

WILL SPEND FORTUNE.

Allan A. Ryan, the financier, whose wife was named in letters he received and turned over to the District Attorney, declared today she also would return from Europe, and that he would prosecute the alleged writer of the letters if it took his entire fortune.

Among disclosures already made by Mr. Banton were that a band of anonymous letter writers had been

Has 53 Pounds on Johnson at New York Milk Fund Carnival

RINGSIDE, Yankee Stadium, New York, May 12.—Jess Willard, former heavyweight champion, showed 53 pounds more weight than Floyd Johnson when the two weighed in for their match today at the great Milk Fund boxing carnival.

Jess tipped the scales at 248; Johnson at only 195.

Willard ruled a 10 to 8 favorite and was picked by most of the experts for a come-back.

Jack Conway of the Boston American said, however, that he believed Johnson's youth, aggressiveness and courage would gain him the victory.

Arrangements were completed in the Stadium to handle a nattendance of 65,000.

At 1 o'clock Tex Rickard, promoter of the boxing carnival, announced that the show would be staged, rain or shine.

Then announcement by Rickard brought cheer to the hearts of all the fight enthusiasts because the

WOMAN ADMITS POISONING BROTHER

Newark, N. J., May 12.—When Mrs. John Creighton was brought before Judge Caffery today to plead on a charge that she and her husband had poisoned her brother, Charles R. Avery, 18 years old, in order to obtain $1,000 insurance money, she said: "Yes, I did it." Creighton denied all knowledge of the crime. They were remanded to jail.

WOULD ABANDON RELIEF HOSPITAL

Because of the big decrease in cases during the past five years, the trustees of the Boston City Hospital have recommended the abandonment of the Haymarket Square Relief Station. The diminishing number of case, is largely due, it was stated, to the congestion of the district.

Mayor Curley stated that he does not intend to discontinue the present Relief Hospital, but will utilize it as a clearing house for alcoholic patients.

preying upon members of the "400" in this and other cities since 1914, and that the victims included the late Enrico Caruso, the Countess of Santa Eulalia, who was the widow of John B. Stetson of Philadelphia, John Drew, the actor, and Albert Gallatino, the banker.

Divorce cases involving persons not named by the district attorney are now pending in the courts, he said.

The alleged poison pen clique's method, according to authorities, was to send letters to middle-aged women, endeavoring to entice them into affairs with members of the group.

METHODS FAILED.

After several months, the writers, either because their methods failed or because they cooled on the intended victim, would send letters to the husbands, brothers or other male relatives of the women to whom they had written, linking their names in obscene and defamatory references to the names of the intended victims.

Members of the society which Maxwell headed say it is inconceivable that he could have been connected with such a plot.

The letters Mr. Ryan turned over to the authorities were received by Mrs. Ryan more than a month ago. All were typewritten and unsigned, but in the upper left corner of each were typed the name and addresses of several prominent bankers and clubmen of this city.

ADVENTIST

THE LORD'S DAY

1ST DAY WHICH? 7TH DAY

Is it Sunday, the First Day, or Saturday, the Seventh Day?

Nearly all the Churches teach the binding obligation of the Ten Commandments. The Fourth Commandment says, "The SEVENTH Day is the Sabbath of the LORD thy God." Yet they conscientiously keep the first day.

WHY?

Cardinal Gibbons says, "You may search the Bible from Genesis to Revelation and you will not find a single text authorizing the substitution of Sunday" for the Sabbath." He says, "The current religion of Christ and His Apostles has illegitimately substituted the FIRST day for the SEVENTH, without any shadow of authority in the New Testament."

Evangelist R. S. FRIES

will examine the EIGHT texts in the New Testament that mention the First day of the week.

THREE TARGETS OF SOCIETY 'JACKALS'

MRS. ALBERT GALLATIN

GOT POISON PEN NOTES

Lying "poison pen" letters sent Mrs. Enrico Caruso (above) attacked several of her dearest friends, Mrs. Gallatin was named in a letter received by John Drew. Below is photo of John Drew.

ler received one attacking a relative in such a vicious manner that his health was broken and he died a short time later.

John Drew had received a letter casting aspersions on Mrs. Albert Gallatin of this city. Mrs. Enrico Caruso received one attacking in the most scurrilous way a half-dozen of her closest friends.

Among others about whom letters were written were Mrs. John D. Stetson and Mrs. L. R. Page of Philadelphia.

Some of the letters bore fake return addresses, giving the names of such persons as Charles M. Billings, vice-president of the Guarantee Trust Company, and William Butler Duncan.

Picture a group of well-to-do middle-aged men, many of them the respected members of conservative and aristocratic clubs of this city, men admitted to the homes of the wealthy and accepted as "first citizens."

Their imagine that same group turned into a vicious association, preying on the good names of their hosts and hostesses through the sending of more than a hundred unspeakably scurrilous letters.

Maxwell, suave, exquisitely dressed, perfumed, well mannered, a familiar figure in New York drawing rooms, married and posing as a bachelor, is considered an authority on matters musical. The society of which he is president includes among its officers such men as Victor Herbert of composition fame.

Maxwell is now in Europe, but is expected to return this Summer. If he does not, extradition proceedings will be resorted to.

Mr. Ryan, not knowing that he was one of many victims of the "Society Jackals," took the letters to the district attorney. Officials discovered that the handwriting on the envelopes was identical with that on other envelopes containing similar attacks four years ago.

LETTERS UNPRINTABLE.

At that time, too, Maxwell was brought before the law as the author, but denied everything and the affair was not pressed. Further present investigation has made the Ryan letters a part of a series extending over a decade and involving scores of prominent persons in New York, Philadelphia and elsewhere.

These missives, every one so salacious in nature that they cannot be included in the indictment nor in court records, much less in the public prints, are type written with the envelope addressed by hand. Return addresses appear on some using the names of leading men not concerned.

The question of blackmail does not enter at all as far as the "poison-pen" missives are concerned. However, it is known that the doings of one prominent member of the gang became known, and he was "shaken down" for $250,000.

BOY "HOG TIED" BY PARENT

May 23. Her husband was held in bail of $100 on the neglect charge.

The boy's mother said: "The tying of the child was ordered by the father because he frequently stole money from my purse. Once recently he took a $2 bill and another time he stole a $5 gold piece.

"So his father decided to adopt a custom he said prevailed in his country and tie him up so he couldn't do any wrong. He was tied up several times."

OLD COURT RECORD BARS MAN FROM JOB

Because he concealed an old court record, George C. Byers today lost his chance to become Deputy Chief of the Westfield Fire Department. Twelve years ago tomorrow Byers was found guilty in the Springfield court of driving his motorcycle so as to injure property and of driving away without waiting to identify himself. His motor-vehicle license was restored to him the following October, but because Byers neglected to state that conviction in his civil service test, Dana has refused to permit his appointment.

BERLIN TO GET BRITISH NOTE TOMORROW

London, May 12 (By the Associated Press).—Great Britain's note to Germany will be handed to Dr. Sthamer, the German ambassador, tomorrow. The main feature is a plea to Germany to make a more generous offer or a settlement of the Ruhr question.

The note does not refer to American participation, nor to appointment of an international arbitral commission.

Communists on Hunger Strike in Paris

Paris, May 12.—Emil Hoellein, member of the German Reichstag, and Gabriel Paeri, secretary of the Association of Communist Youth, held for trial on charges of committing offences against the security of the state, have begun a hunger strike, L'Humanite announces today. The strike is in protest against "the illegal and arbitrary sequestration" of the two men. Eleven of those awaiting trial, including Marcel Cachin, were released on personal recognizance last Monday.

Charges French Issue Counterfeit Money

Berlin, May 12 (By the Associated Press).—Since the occupation of the Ruhr the French and Belgians have forcibly seized 27,187,000,000 marks in German currency, says Dr. Otto Von Glasenapp, vice-president of the Reichsbank, in a statement given to the press.

He further asserts that the French have been issuing counterfeit German money, amounting so far to 85,000,00 marks, from one of the plates seized in the raid on the Muelheim printing plant on April 6.

ODDS 10 TO 8 ON WILLARD

prospect had been discouraging.

A light rain fell shortly after 10 o'clock and threatened to cause postponement. Rickard announced at that that hour that, if postponement should be necessary, the bouts would be held next Saturday.

FANS EARLY IN LINE.

An early line of 500 fans had formed at that time. When the rain descended the line broke and the fans scurried to cover.

The contenders scheduled for the other bouts weighed in. Louis Firpo, the Argentine, weighed 212 against an even 200 for Jack McAuliffe, 2d, of Detroit.

Fred Fulton, Minneapolis, weighed 214 against 189½ for his opponent, Jack Renault, the Canadian title-holder.

Jim Herman of Omaha weighed 218½ while Al Reich of Newark weighed 206½.

The pair scheduled for the opening bout, Joe McCann of Newark and Harry Drake of England, weighed 202 and 185 respectively.

At noon the rain had weakened to a slight drizzle. By that time more than 5,000 had jammed outside the stadium gates.

There was a fair sprinkling of women in the crowd.

A radio outfit inside the park provided entertainment for those waiting for the gates to be opened.

At 1 o'clock, when Rickard announced that the show would go on, wet or dry, the rain had stopped and the sun had broken through the clouds.

A few minutes later all gates were opened. The crowd, estimated then at 10,000, swarmed in and headed for the $2 and $1 bleacher seats. The grandstand held a scattering few.

Two bands, one in centre field and the other in the right field bleacher section, tuned up and began to hurl out jazz strains to tickle the ears of the early arrivals.

IMPROVES NEW DIABETES CURE

Atlantic City, N. J., May 12.—Discovery of a radical improvement in the newly announced cure of diabetes mellitus, with a lower element of danger in the over administration of insulin, was announced by Dr. Eugene W. Torrey, of this city in an address before the Atlantic County Medical Society. Dr. Torrey claims to have discovered a process that enables the insulin to be placed in a capsule and administered by mouth. The effect of this treatment was that in several cases the patients were freed from sugar within 30 days. Several of these were coma cases, he said.

Girl Asks Governor to Electrocute or Shoot Her

Nashville, Tenn., May 12.—Governor Austin Peay today received the following request from a girl in a little town in middle Tennessee:

"I'm writing to ask you if I may have the privilege of being drugged to insensibility and electrocuted or shot." The letter relates futile attempts upon the girl's part to restore herself to physical and mental health and adds:

"I have no one who is able to care for me. Life is no good. You know a person like this is better off dead."

SEDAN CRASHES INTO STREET CAR; 3 HURT

A heavy sedan, driven by S. H. L. Gustafson of No. 4 Mckinley street, Worcester, crashed sideways into a crowded Boston & Worcester trolley car on Weston road, near Worcester street, Wellesley, today seriously injuring three persons.

Both car and automobile were going at a high rate of speed, and the force of the impact was so great that the trolley car was pushed off the track.

The more seriously injured were in the automobile. They are all from Worcester. They were:

S. H. L. Gustafson, badly cut about the face.

Miss Elvina Wall, nineteen years old, fractured collar bone, abrasions of head and face and possible internal injuries.

Miss Hilda Eckstrom, sixteen years old, badly cut about the head and face, and right arm sprained.

All were taken to the Natick Hospital.

Both auto and car were badly damaged, and it was found necessary to send out another car to take on the passengers.

Every window on one side of the car was broken, the glass flying in all directions. Passengers were thrown from their seats, and several reported slight cuts.

A woman and boy, who were in the sedan, ran away after the accident, and the police were unable to learn their names.

The trolley was Worcester bound, while Gustafson was on his way to Scituate. Gustafson was turning into Weston road from Worcester street when the accident occurred, police say.

FULLER AND FILENE TO ATTEND PARLEY

Lieutenant-Governor Alvan T. Fuller and E. A. Filene will join Mayor James M. Curley and E. A. Johnson, president of the Boston Central Labor Union, in an industrial conference Monday evening at the American House. Lieutenant-Governor Fuller and Mayor Curley will speak briefly for the State and city, and the principal addresses will be by Filene and Johnson. The former's subject is "Success in Business and Democracy," and Johnson will tell of some of the achievements of organized labor.

ACCUSES BORROWER OF STEALING $15

Erroll Miller, colored, of Cedar street, Roxbury, was held in $500 for the grand jury by Judge Dowd in municipal court today on charge of robbing Mrs. Mary Roderick, white, of No. 45 Worcester street, of $15 cash, $20 beads and $10 nose-glasses.

Mrs. Miller said she met Miller, whom she knew, in Washington street early today and that he asked for loan of a dollar, which she said he could have if he walked back to her home. She told him to wait outside, but he insisted on coming up to her room, she said, and then seized her money, beads and glasses and fled.

BAKER LEADS LIST FOR FIRE CAPTAIN

Lieutenant Daniel W. Baker of Allston headed the list of seventy-four lieutenants who passed the civil service test for promotion to captain in the Boston Fire Department, according o announcement made today by Civil Service Commissioner Payson Dana. The next ten followed in this order: John McCarthy, Daniel J. Bell, Michael F. Minehan, William Peterson, Maurice J. Prendergast, Michael D. Sullivan, Charles A. Thompson, Joseph W. Shea, John H. Loughlin and Edward J. Locke.

TAKE CONVICTS FROM CAMP OF SENATOR

Gainesville, Fla., May 12.—The county commissioners today severed their contract with T. J. Knabb, State Senator, for the leasing of prisoners and demanded the immediate return of all county prisoners leased to him.

The commissioners assert that convicts have not been given the kind of treatment required by the contract.

It was at the turpentine camp operated by Senator Knabb that Paul Revere White, Taunton, Mass., youth, was flogged by a whipping boss.

Tallahassee, Fla., May 12.—"If you won't prohibit corporal punishment, then you should at least require that the whipping master love his charge," William Jennings Bryan told the Florida Legislature in an address.

He referred to arguments advanced in the voluminous debate of the last few weeks in consideration of convict reforms that, since parents are permitted to whip their children, there was no reason why the lash should be abolished for convicts.

It is too great a temptation to place on any man, Mr. Bryan said.

What's the Biggest Thing?
Enough of War
One Healthy Baby
Fighters Old at Forty

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1923, by Star Company

HOW BIG is the biggest thing in the universe? Is there any limit to size or to littleness?

Professor Michelson of Chicago has made possible actual measurement of Betelguese, the biggest star we know at present. Its diameter is 242,000,000 miles.

Our sun is a million times as big as our earth. Yet, compared with Betelguese, it would be like a grain of dust compared with a tennis ball. If Betelguese were hollow our sun might be at the centre, and the earth, more than 90,000,000 miles away from the sun, might sail around inside of hollow Betelguese without touching the hollow wall of that great star.

That doesn't keep man from thinking himself and his important little soul the two most important works of the Creator.

"ANOTHER WAR!" the Labor members of Parliament shouted when it was announced England had sent a warship to prevent Russian seizure of British trawlers.

That cry, "Another war," the protest of English labor against England's attitude to Russia, means that English labor has had enough fighting for the present.

ORDINARILY WHAT labor wants or thinks seems comparatively unimportant to those that govern.

But when it comes to war no country can ignore labor, since men that do the work in peace have to do 80 per cent. of the fighting in war. If such men refused to be conscripted no war would amount to much.

The English government knows how British labor feels about more fighting, hence the effort to keep out of war at almost any cost—even humiliation.

STANDARD OIL is composed of many little babies, born when the big company was chopped up by the government, killing the trust.

The New York baby yesterday added seventy-five millions to its stock, making a capitalization of $300,000,000.

If Standard Oil could have in each of the forty-eight States a separate little oil baby, with two or three hundred millions of capitalization, that would be almost as good as owning the original trust and much more "regular."

TODAY MR. JESS WILLARD, forty years old and more, will fight Mr. Floyd Johnson, a twenty-two-year-old Scandinavian. That contest will be watched with interest even by those not interested in prize fighting. The money collected will be spent to buy milk for poor children.

At the same time the athletic world will find out how much fighting energy a man can retain after forty.

JESS WILLARD has one advantage. He began to fight at twenty-nine, an age at which prize fighters are usually burned out and more or less erratic mentally.

AT THE SAME fighting festival the crowd will see Luis Firpo, from beyond the equator, an Argentinian giant, described as a living cave man. Other fighters don't like him because, while he doesn't know much about boxing, he won't be knocked down. If he fares well in the next fight or two he will fight Mr. Dempsey, and the public will gladly pay at least a million dollars to see that important encounter.

GEORGE HARVEY has returned to America feeling quite well.

THE RUSSIANS are indignant because their representative at Lausanne was murdered, and they want some kind of revenge and satisfaction from Switzerland. We are always very touchy about swallowing our own medicine.

WIFE MORALLY FIT AS MOTHER, COURT FINDS

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE BRIGGS

George Briggs, of No. 67 Cedar street, Somerville, must allow his wife, Marie Briggs, to have custody of their baby, Ruth, the first eighteen days of every month.

This was the decision of Judge Chamberlain in the Middlesex Probate Court. Briggs sought permanent custody, claiming that his wife was not attentive to her baby and that she was morally unfit to take care of her.

The couple were separated in February. Then Judge Chamberlain made the same decision.

Mrs. Champagen, mother of Mrs. Briggs, testified that while walking along Huron avenue two weeks ago Briggs knocked her to the ground and carried off the baby, who has since been at her father's home in Somerville.

Several witnesses, present to testify to the conduct of Mrs. Briggs, prior to February 7th last, were dismissed, the court ruling that events prior to then did not concern the case.

Briggs testified that he had supported the child and had given the mother money on several occasions.

Counsel for Briggs asked the court to have the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children investigate the home life of the child while it was under the care of the mother.

SEDAN CRUSHED TO SKELETON BY TWO TROLLEYS

Angus McInnis, of No. 11 Hicks avenue, Medford, owes his life to the steering gear of his sedan. It prevented him from being killed today when his automobile was crushed between two one-man trolley cars on Prospect street, Cambridge. The machine was demolished, but McInnis escaped with minor injuries. A friend who was riding with him escaped unhurt.

Thirty passengers on one car, mostly women, screamed when the accident occurred.

Witnesses say that while trying to pass a trolley car on the left going toward Central square, McInnes crashed head-on into another. Impact with the second trolley car threw the automobile against the other. The machine was then crushed between the two. Only the skeleton of the automobile remained at the conclusion.

The driver of a passing truck took McInnes and his friend to the hospital. Both trolley cars proceeded under their own power to their destinations.

ARREST 4 AFFLUENT BARBERS AS BANDITS

New York, May 12.—In the arrest of four barbers in Harlem today police believe they captured the bandits who robbed two messengers of the Municipal Bank in Brooklyn of $50,000, held up a Manhattan restaurant for $1,200 and obtained $10,000 in an uptown theatre robbery. The prisoners are: Frank Fulco, Sam Urichio, Peter Amoroso and Charles Spadia. All four were fashionably dressed and wore large diamonds. The wives of three of them, similarly adorned, accompanied the prisoners. According to the police, Urichio recently purchased a road house near Hartford, Ct., and Spadea is the owner of two large automobiles.

ARREST ENGINEER IN MAN'S DEATH

Salem, May 12.—Judge Robert W. Hill, in an inquest report filed today on the death of Freeman R. Chase of Danvers, crushed between a shifting engine and freight car in the Salem freight yard on March 17, found that the accident was due to alleged neglect of William S. Punchard, ngineer of the shifter. Punchard, who lives in Peabody, was arrested and bailed in $1,000 for appearance in court Monday on a manslaughter charge.

FREE STATE WILL RELEASE O'BRIEN

Dublin, May 12 (By the Associated Press.)—Kevin O'Higgins, Irish Free State Secretary of Home Affairs, stated to the press today that he would deliver to the British, Art O'Brien and all other persons deported from England to Ireland when they were demanded.

The secretary said he considered the agreement under which the prisoners were obtained from England included compliance with successful habeas corpus motions. A writ of habeas corpus was recently obtained in England for O'Brien.

In raids by authorities in England in March more than 100 Irishmen wanted by the Free State were rounded up and deported to Ireland. Recently the British Court of Appeal granted a habeas corpus writ on behalf of Art O'Brien. An appeal was taken by the government to the House of Lords and the case is set for a hearing next Monday.

Earlier advices from Ireland had indicated that the Free State would be unwilling to give up the deportees.

HARVARD CRIMSON 50 YEARS OLD TODAY

Jerome Greene of New York and President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard will address 150 editors past and present, of the Harvard Crimson tonight when the college daily celebrates its fiftieth anniversary at Harvard Union. A cloth-bound volume of more than 100 pages, a history of the paper, has been published by three student editors, Lawrence Rose of Hartford, R. A. Cushman of Montclair, N. J., and Robert Worthing of Dedham.

FLAMING AUTO TRUCK RUNS WILD

Races Down Somerville Hill Like Ball of Fire and Menaces House at Bottom

A flaming automobile truck, rolling down Winter Hill, Somerville, crashed across the curb, uprooted a small tree, then stopped against a larger tree and threatened to set fire to the home of Dr. Harry Walker, No. 464 Broadway, Somerville, today.

W. E. Hayes, driver for Francis Cummings, milk dealer, was proceeding up the hill from Magoun square with several hundred cans of milk for the Chelsea Naval Hospital when spurts of flame shot up around his feet. He jumped from the moving truck.

The machine went ahead a few feet, stopped and then rolled back down hill more than 100 feet before it jumped the curb and started across the Waller lawn. When it stopped it was less than six feet from the house.

BANDITS INSIST ON PAYMENT OF RANSOM

By the Associated Press.

Tien Tsin, May 12.—Payment of ransom or compliance with whatever other terms the Chinese train bandits of the Shantung hills might demand for the return of their foreign captives seems today the only feasible move, in view of the letter, urging such a course, received here from Major Roland Finger, one of two American army officers held by the outlaws.

Not yet was the letter from Major Finger dispatched here from the bandits, retreat today, but the young son of Major Finger, Roland, Jr., was also. He came in company with another boy, Robert Allen, Jr., the son of Major Allen, the other American officer held for ransom.

The boys brought word that two women are still held captives. One is believed to be the wife of a prominent Mexican.

Miss Aldrich's Maid Heroine of Bandit Raid

By EDNA LEE BOOKER
International News Service
(Copyright 1923 by International News Service.)

Shanghai, May 12.—A French maid employed by Miss Lucy C. Aldrich, sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., proved the heroine of the train raid when many foreigners were seized by Chinese bandits near the Shatung frontier, said a dispatch from Tatsan Fu today.

The maid is Mlle. Schlosbern, an orphan. When the train was attacked she hid a diamond bracelet, a solitaire, and a wallet filled with money under the seat of the Aldrich compartment. Clad only in her night gown, Mlle. Schlosbern was driven with the other prisoners towards the distant mountains. Her companion was another woman.

"We walked through the dark forest," said the maid. "It was very cold and the way was rough and hard.

"On Monday the soldiers attacked. The bandit chief demanded a volunteer to wave a white flag and visit the commander of the troops to tell him that the prisoners would be tortured and put to death unless the soldiers retired.

"I did not know what the bandits would do if the soldiers kept on firing. I was desperate, so I jumped up and said I would carry the flag.

"I told Mrs. Nailly 'My mother is dead. I am all alone in the world. I am devoted to Miss Aldrich and if I can save her life I am willing to try.'

CAMBRIDGE CLEAN, SAYS MAYOR

Citizens' Alliance Charges of Bootleg Protection Scouted

Denials of charges of "protection to bootleggers," contained in an open letter issued by the Cambridge Citizens' Alliance, were made today by Mayor Edward W. Quinn and Chief of Police John J. McBride.

The alliance deplores conditions and has threatened, through the Rev. William Macnair, Congregationalist, to publish other detailed statements.

Declaring Cambridge to be "the cleanest city in the Commonwealth, Mayor Quinn said: "If this alliance has any evidence of any violations of the law, the mayor will be very glad to receive them and will very gladly welcome any co-operation on the part of the alliance.

"I am confident, however, that Cambridge is an extremely clean city. In the foreign section around Cambridgeport liquor is occasionally manufactured but whenever they attempt to sell it the police clean up immediately.

"As a matter of fact, neither the chief of police nor I have ever been offered any co-operation by these alliance people."

The mayor said the liquor squad headed by Sergeant Charles Presho, had orders to go in any precinct without informing the captains or chief until after the raids were completed.

Chief McBride charged: "They go outside and buy their whiskey and bring it to Cambridge to drink it. The liquor squad has made more raids the past year than ever before. We will soon drive every bootlegger out of Cambridge. No men her of this force has or is affording any protection to bootleggers or moonshiners."

Rev. William Macnair, in his charges said in part:

"At the present time the Alliance is trying to educate public opinion. While we have a general knowledge of the conditions described in the letter, we have not the evidence to take in court. Other more detailed statements are forthcoming from time to time until we arouse the community."

PROMINENT NAMES.

This letter, which points out the excess in the number of arrests for drunkenness recently over those for a corresponding period in 1922 and other years, is signed by Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard; Alexander Bell, Arthur L. Miles, Samuel Usher and the Rev. Macnair. The letter says in part:

"Such conditions could not exist unless bootleggers were prevalent. Bootlegging on a large scale, according to the best authorities, indicates protection from some source. Every citizen, every official who values the good name of his town should ask himself 'Whence the effective protection for bootlegging in Cambridge?'"

THE COURT RECORD.

Attention is called to the record of Station 7co. 3 in Cambridge. Out of 115 cases of liquor law violations brought to this court in 1922 there were eighty-five convictions. Of these only four received fines over $100. Only four actually went to jail. One paid a fine and also went to jail. And "a bootlegger is supposed to earn easily $50 a morning."

Orono, Me.—Appointment of Dr. William S. Taylor of Madison, Wis., to be professor of philosophy at the University of Maine, was announced today.

ACCUSE JILTED SUITOR AS HER ABDUCTOR

MRS. BIASIUCCI AND PEDRO SCARO
Lawrence bride who was seized, forced into an automobile and carried off and the man suspected in the kidnaping.

FIGHT WILL OF WIFE WHO HAD 4 HUSBANDS

Nedia, Pa., May 12.—Action to prevent the probating of the will of Mrs. Ada Sherwood, an actress, who died at her home near here last Fall, was brought here today.

Mrs. Sherwood, although only 24 years old when she died, had been married four times. She bequeathed her entire estate, valued at $115,000, to her mother, Mrs. I. McAllister, of Augusta, Ga.

Her third and fourth husbands, respectively, Ralph B. Minnick of Philadelphia and Lieutenant Gordon Sherwood, stationed at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, are the contenders in the litigation.

Sherwood contends the will is invalid and that his wife died intestate. Minnick has filed suit in Philadelphia to have set aside the divorce granted to Mrs. Sherwood in 1919. He alleges she fraudulently obtained the decree while he was in the army.

In the event his plea is granted, Minnick would be restored as the woman's legal husband at the time of her death, and so entitled to a share of her estate. Sherwood would lose his present status.

GATELEYSTRICKEN IN CITY HALL

Assistant City Auditor John J. Gateley, fifty-seven years old, of No. 101 Brown avenue, Roslindale, was stricken with heart attack brought on by high blood pressure while at work in City Hall today.

Dr Frederick J. Bailey of the health department declared his condition "extremely serious" and ordered his removal to City Hospital.

Rev. Charles A. Arnold of St. Mary's Church, North End, was called to administer the last rites, but Gateley remained unconscious.

Gateley, one of the best known city employes, went to work for the city in 1885. He has a wife and five children.

POLICE SEEKING KIDNAPER WHO STOLE BRIDE

Lawrence, May 12.—Charged because the woman he had courted had married her former husband, it is charged, Pedro Scaro of Waterbury, Ct., swept into Common street with a motor car, seized Mrs. Florence Biasiucci, twenty-three years old, and escaped with her despite her struggles.

Thousands of persons on Common street heard the woman's screams as she was forced into the automobile and saw her husband attempt to board the car as it gathered speed.

Police are searching the country-side for the woman, the wife of Salvators Biasiucci, No. 297½ Oak street, this city. The car has been found by the police, identified by the husband, and Gaetano Bruno, driver of the car, is under arrest for speeding.

According to Biasiucci, he and his wife were returning from the Arlington Mills, where they are employed in the spinning room. Scaro, he says, drove up to the curb in an automobile and engaged him in conversation. His wife, he said, an interested in the occupants of the car, walked on ahead, evidently expecting him to overtake her in a few moments.

When she had gone less than a hundred yards, the car suddenly leapt forward and came to a stop near where the woman was walking. Scaro jumped from the car and, grasping Mrs. Biasiucci, bodily carried her in the machine.

Biasiucci married Florence Zannini, then seventeen years old, the daughter of Banni Zannini, No. 131 Oak street, this city, five years ago. After a year his wife left him, going to Waterbury, Ct. A year and a half ago he obtained a divorce on the grounds of desertion.

Sydney, N. S.—Sidney Barrett, former member of the International board of the United Mine Workers, joined the staff of the Maritime Labor Herald into the street after a fight in the offices. Barrett's attack came after the paper had criticized him.

SEEK BODY OF BAY STATE MAN

Former Springfield Resident Vanishes in Cleveland While Bringing in Prisoner

Cleveland, May 12 (By the Associated Press).—Search for Patrolman Dennis Griffin, kidnaped policeman, formerly of Springfield, Mass., who is believed to have been murdered, was continued today by hundreds of policemen after an all-day and all night hunt yesterday failed to bring any trace of the officer, his abductor or the automobile in which the patrolman and his prisoner started for a police station yesterday morning.

An all-night search by police of ravines, gullies and roads in the vicinity where Griffin and his prisoner were last seen failed to reveal the policeman's body. The search was continued today with hundreds of citizens, farmers, Boy Scouts and school children joining the police in the hunt.

Police efforts today were directed largely toward locating everybody who might have seen the patrolman after he started with his prisoner for the police station.

To this end a countrywide effort was started yesterday and will be pressed to locate John L. Whitfield, with whom the patrolman was last seen. Police have sent broadcast the description of Whitfield and the automobile he used.

They are seeking him as the man who drove away with Griffin. Only three persons reported having seen the automobile after Griffin disappeared. Of these, only one, George A. Dixon, a machinist, saw Griffin in the car. The other two said only the driver was in the roadster when they saw it.

EX-COP APPEALS JAIL SENTENCE

Former patrolman, Frank W. Larrives of Newton, thirty-seven years old, of No. 40 Austin street, Newtonville, was today given six months in the House of Correction for stealing a can of white lead from the paint shop of Patrick T. Hourley, No. 1237 Centre street, Newton. Sentence was imposed by Judge Bacon in Newton court.

Larrivee was on the Newton police force from 1908 to August, 1922, when he was dismissed by Mayor Roberts O. Childs for untruthfulness to his superior officer.

During the war he was suspended on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer, but was later reinstated.

INDICT SIRACUSA FOR SLAYING WIFE

Michael Siracusa was indicted today by Suffolk Grand Jury on the charge of murder in the first degree for shooting his wife as she left the City Hospital recently where she had visited her son.

William B. Driscoll was indicted on the charge of manslaughter. Driscoll's car collided with a truck so violently that James Linehan, a passenger, was thrown off a bridge to the railroad tracks on Columbia road and killed.

Hubert G. Crowley was indicted for assault with a dangerous weapon on Captain John Driscoll and Special Officer James O'Neil of Dedham street station when they arrested him. The Grand Jury reported ninety indictments and twenty-five no bills for the May sitting.

THREE ALREADY WIN PLACE IN SCREEN CAST

"The Affairs of Lady Boston"
A Two-Reel Travesty

"The Affairs of Lady Hamilton"
Now Playing at the Park Theatre
Produced by the Boston American in conjunction with the Hodkinson Corporation of New York, with an All-Star Cast of Boston Amateurs.
Cameraman, Bill Spooner.
Technical Director, Phil Dunne.

THE CAST

Lady Boston
Miss Helen Wayne
The Mother...Mrs. Sarah Lord
Queen of the Cabaret
Doris Colburn

That's as far as we can go at this writing, fans.

Next week we'll tell you about the rest of the cast. Thus far these three have been definitely decided upon by Mr. Brager, who is to direct the two-reel travesty on "The Affairs of Lady Hamilton."

Miss Wayne, who is to play the leading role of "Lady Boston," lives at No. 1024 Commonwealth avenue. Later we will tell more about her. Mrs. Sarah Lord, cast for the mother role in the comedy, is of No. 108 Hemenway street, Back Bay.

The Cabaret Queen will be played by Miss Doris Colburn of No. 90 Terrace avenue, Winthrop. Miss Colburn, by the way, is the Boston young woman selected by Rodolph Valentino on his recent visit here as the most beautiful girl in New England.

In the cabaret scene, one of the most pretentious in the picture, she will have a chance to display her beauty in a marvelous gown obtained expressly for this production. The cabaret shots will be taken on Wednesday of next week, and Leo Reisman, leader of the orchestra in the Egyptian Room at the Hotel Brunswick, will appear in that scene, together with his famous orchestra. Mr. Reisman will furnish the setting for the cabaret scene.

By Monday we expect to know who will play the other principal roles in "The Affairs of Lady Boston." Pictures of those selected will be printed in the American as announced.

Work on the picture starts at 9 o'clock Monday morning, when the entire company of principals will journey forth "on location" in automobiles furnished by Mr. Brager.

Be sure to get Monday's Boston American if you want to get further details about this motion picture, in which the cast is made up exclusively of men, women and children of Boston and vicinity.

CHOSEN FOR ROLES IN BOSTON MOVIE

Three of the members of the cast of "The Affairs of Lady Boston," to be produced next week. At top, Helen Wayne, who is to play Lady Boston; below, left, Doris Colburn, who will portray the role of the Cabaret Girl; right, Mrs. Sarah Lord, who will play the mother. More pictures of members of the cast will appear in Monday's editions of the Boston American.

REAL ESTATE HAPPENINGS

Shaw & Flynn, real estate brokers, of No. 183 Belgrade avenue, Roslindale, have opened a new office at the corner of Centre and Mt. Vernon streets, West Roxbury, in order to better handle their growing business in this rapidly developing section.

Among the sales completed by Shaw & Flynn during the week are the following transactions:

The sale by Thomas Hurley to H. Hollerbach of the new bungalow at No. 22 Massachusetts avenue, Dedham. This property, being new, is not yet assessed. Papers have passed.

The transfer from Frederic Wescott to Mary E. Smith of the six apartment frame house and 7,200 square feet of land at Nos. 22-24 Sheffield road, Roslindale, assessed for a total of $14,000, of which $2,000 is on the land.

To the Parkway Associates, who bought to improve with stores, garages and dwellings, a plot of land comprising 50,000 square feet with a frontage of 200 feet on Central street and 159 feet on Centre street, Roslindale. Elsie Buckley was the grantor. The assessed value is $11,000.

The Claridge Sea Grill, Incorporated, have purchased the fixtures and equipment of the Biltmore Cafeteria, and have taken over the lease of the store and basement at No. 615 Washington street.

George Liberman and Louis Cohen have leased the street and second floor at Nos. 75-77 Portland street from Louis Arvedon.

The above leases were negotiated by the office of W. H. Ballard & Co., Inc.

NEW RED BIRD OVERLAND IS A BEAUTY

The 1923 series of the Overland has lately been added to by the bringing out of a remarkably triumphant combination of beauty and utility, finished in Mandalay Maroon, called the Red Bird. This model is specially notable for the complete equipment it carries on leaving the factory.

The Red Bird is characterized by the installation of a number of refinements and conveniences. This latest model is a brilliant accomplishment by the Willys-Overland Company, and as usual represents a successful effort to provide up-to-date and economical transportation for the American public.

MAROON BODY.

In general appearance the Red Bird is a creation striking to the eye without overstepping the bounds of refined taste. Mandalay Maroon is a subtle shading of red for the body.

Combined with this artistic blending is the khaki top of serviceable material that will also hold its own in all seasons. And with this happy conjunction of tan and maroon are sprinkled the glistening nickeled trimmings on the radiator, head lamps, bumpers, windshield stanchions, scuff plates and frame of the rear curtain window light.

Comfortable riding qualities have always been demanded in Overland design, and in order to place further emphasis on this requirement the wheel base of the Red Bird has been lengthened to 106 inches and the spring base to 136 inches. This additional length positively guarantees bodily relaxation when driving over the roughest roads.

The Red Bird has the famous patented triplex springs used on all Overland cars, and these springs on a longer wheel base give riding comfort in the highest degree possible.

ENGINE LARGER.

The engine in the Red Bird is larger and more powerful, yet preserving all the facilities of the Overland motor for giving unusual mileage per gallon of gasoline.

The crank case or engine base has a double bottom which increases the strength and rigidity, and provides correct oil supply to all connecting rods under all road and grade conditions. There is a sump for collecting sediment at one spot where the drain plug is placed, and the oil gauge is so located that it is plainly visible.

The clutch, which is of the single plate disc type, smooth in operation and adjusted in less than ten minutes when necessary, is enclosed in a case giving complete protection from dirt and grit, and runs in oil, insuring proper lubrication at all times.

The extra equipment is prominently brought to notice. This includes 30 by 3½ straight weil cord tires, nickeled bumper in the front and in the rear, nickeled scuff plates, nickeled outside door handles, and nickeled frame in the rear curtain window. The windshield stanchions are also nickeled.

A windshield wiper and door grips are standard on this model, and the usual spare rim and tire carrier, speedometer, dash light and other little fixtures that make the car wonderfully complete are noticeable.

Mr. Fix-It answers queries in this column on Saturday and does not answer by mail. Please do not send stamps for replies.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—I have a 1923 Hupmobile and would like to break it in without using oil when in the engine. I read you would tell me the proper way to operate a car without using carbon and gasoline.

It is impossible to operate your internal combustion motor without formation of some carbon. The best fuel gasoline has a tendency to form carbon more readily than the high test fuel of a few years ago, but on the other hand the refiner sells today gasoline of a higher grade. There are devices on the market which are claimed to help eliminate carbon. You might have one of these installed.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—Am having trouble with my car heating. It is a Chevrolet 1918. I have let the oil out and run kerosene through, then put new oil in. Have cleaned carbon and have run water through radiator, yet she gets so hot the water boils out, say 3 miles in 6 miles. Have new spark plugs and all work O.K. The car runs fine, lots of pep and pulls every time you ask. Hope you can help me by advice through this column.—H. B., Claremont, N. H.

Your over heating may come from several causes and it is a case of elimination to find out which is the one. You may have a bad spark or in fact one of which is too late. Also the water pump perturbating may be worn so that this rotor does not retain. This would impede the proper circulation of the water and of course your motor would heat up very quickly. The fan shaft operates this rotor and if your fan belt is too loose you will not get proper circulation. If your radiator has been repaired and of the tubes may have been plugged or some device may have been used which plugged the tubes. Our impression is that it is probably due to the water system somewhere.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—I have a 1918 Chevrolet 490, and it has a noise near end. Could you kindly write me and tell me the matter. Don't know if the noise is in front or second but I get the noise in first or second but I get it in high. Just as soon as I start going I hear the noise, and it is not when climbing a hard grade, hardly, but on a level road. It is most evident when going down grade and when going down grade I also hear it in transmission. I put in fibre grease and that seemed to eliminate a little. Thanking you for any advice you may give, I am.—M. C., Medford.

There is no adjustment on the Chevrolet 490 rear axle without taking it apart. Then it is possible to adjust the pinion gear by sliding it on the shaft. Your ring gear may be sprung, which would cause the grinding. If it is necessary to put in a new ring and pinion gear we doubt very much if it is worth while.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—Please could you give me any idea what is wrong with my car as it knocks when going 20 miles an hour on the level and when going down hills with the clutch engaged. That is the only time I can hear it. It is a good knock but when it is pulling hard it is O.K. It will climb hills without knocking, and it seems to come from the front of the engine. My car is an Overland Country Club, model 90, 1918. I have tried to find it but I cannot find it. Thought you could give me a little information as I read your columns every week.—L. C., New Bedford.

Probably your trouble comes from worn rod bushings and there is nothing you can do but replace them, but we would advise you not to bother about it at the cost of replacing would be too much for the value of the car.

NEW WILLYS-OVERLAND MODEL

FORD TOURIST HAS 'AT HOME' FEELING

That satisfying "at home" feeling which the Ford tourist always has felt wherever he has gone will be stronger than ever this Summer. There are now nearly 6,000,000 Ford cars in use in the United States and he will come upon more members of the great Ford family in the towns and cities and along the highway of the nation than in any year heretofore.

In the last year alone 1,500,000 new Fords have gone into use throughout the country. And the Ford owner who goes touring enjoys what no other car owner enjoys, the satisfaction of knowing he has the greatest of service facilities at his command, assuring him of a pleasant journey no matter where his travels may take him.

In addition to the Ford dealer organization of more than 9000, there are over 14,000 authorized Ford service stations in the country, making a total of more than 23,000 points of contact with the motoring public.

FLAT RATE PLAN SERVICE COST USED BY DODGE

No more prolific cause of friction between the car owner, on the one side, and the dealer, on the other, has ever existed than the matter of service charges. Happily a means has been discovered whereby that difficulty in the way of harmonious relationship has been to a large extent removed. The solution was a long time in coming but it has finally arrived among progressive concerns in the industry—it is the flat rate for service.

Under the flat rate plan the owner and the dealer agree upon what is to be done to a car and then the price is fixed according to a schedule worked out by the manufacturers and the dealers all over the country. Something over a year ago Dodge Brothers, one of the most progressive of motor car manufacturers, introduced the flat rate system among their dealers. Since then many others have followed. As one of the largest dealers in the country the Henshaw Motor Co. early accepted the flat rate plan.

Now Easier Than Ever to Own a Ford

SALE OF STOCK FOR HOTEL PROMOTED BY MRS. HAYES STOPPED

BANNED BY STATE BOARD UNDER THE BLUE SKY LAW

department from firms selling stock in this State.

The order forbidding the sale of securities is made, the department announces, in order to "prevent fraud or possibility of fraud."

The company proposed to raise over $5,000,000 in three ways, as follows:

1. The sale of $2,575,000 in first mortgage bonds to be sold by the American Bond & Mortgage Company of Chicago.

2. The sale of $2,000,000 in debenture bonds, to be sold by the Chatham Securities Company of Boston, especially organized for that purpose.

3. The sale of 12,500 shares of preferred stock valued at $100 per share, to be handled by the Chatham Securities Company.

This company has for its president William Frye White. The other officers are practically the same as the officers of the Chatham Inc., which is planning to erect the $5,000,000 Chatham Hotel in Brookline.

Bostonia, Inc., another corporation in which Mrs. Hayes was interested, notified the department today that it did not intend to sell any more stock. The company stated that stock has not been sold since April 20th.

BAILED BY "MYSTERY MAN."

A prominent person in Boston, whom New York officials decline to name, is reported to have gone security today for Mrs. Hayes.

This "mystery" person saved her from the looks after she was deserted last night by the bonding company which had furnished $10,000 bonds when she was charged with forging the name of Charles M. Schwab to a $25,000 note.

Today Mrs. Hayes was jubilant, pleading she would make some startling disclosures when the charges against her were tried. Her brother, J. R. Bowman, who helped her get bail, said she had known Schwab since she was twenty, and would prove she had not forged his name.

Her bondsmen, the Detroit Fidelity & Surety Company, obtained a "surrender piece" in general sessions yesterday, which authorized them to arrest their client, incarcerate her and withdraw their bonds.

Sometime after midnight, at the end of a period when a score of telephone and telegraph messages had been dispatched from Mrs. Hayes' apartment, it was announced that satisfactory security had been assured and the bonds would be continued.

Mrs. Hayes launched an automatic slot machine venture at a brilliant banquet in Worcester staged to lure investors, it was learned today.

Her grandiloquent picture of big profits so charmed her guests that $400,000 was subscribed on the spot, say business men who attended.

One of the guests was H. E. Manville of New York, one of the founders of the Johns-Manville, Inc., whom she had induced to help float her slot machine dream which, like others, was soon shattered by failure.

SCHEME FAILED.

Mrs. Hayes brought about the formation of the National Sales Machine Company in Worcester which took over the sales of the Hobbs Manufacturing Company. It was to promote this scheme that Mrs. Hayes made her debut in Worcester four or five years ago.

She is reported to have interested Mr. Manville among the first in the plan to sell automatic slot machines to rejuvenate the Hobbs Company. Mr. Manville made a special trip from New York to listen with scores of other prospective investors to Mrs. Hayes' magic oratory.

The automatic slot machines was only one of a string of pet schemes which Mrs. Hayes tried to exploit, but a firm pursued and that like her earlier and later enterprises fell flat.

It was learned today that the Department of Public Utilities of Massachusetts has barred the sale of securities of Chatham, Incorporated, as fraudulent. The action of the commission was based on the failure of the corporation to submit certain information required of it by the department.

Chatham, Incorporated, was the company formed by Mrs. Hayes to erect a $5,000,000 apartment hotel in Brookline.

Beautifully engraved debenture bonds to the amount of $2,700,000 were about to be unloaded on Boston investors when the New York police abruptly stopped the frantic financing of Mrs. Hayes.

The campaign to dispose of these bonds was already under way when Charles M. Schwab, steel magnate, repudiated his alleged indorsement of seven notes to the amount of $325,000 and letters guaranteeing to stand "back of her for $1,500,000," which were negotiated by Mrs. Hayes and her associates.

Several Boston business men are eagerly awaiting the recital of her story. Among them, it was reported, but unverified, is A. N. Wasson of the Aberthaw Company, one of the largest construction firms in the country. Mr. Wasson, according to the report, took up four notes bearing the allegedly false signature of Mr. Schwab.

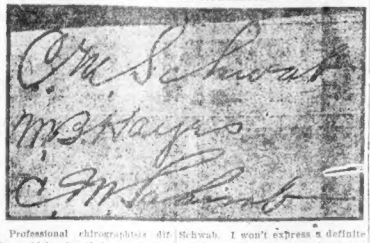
Mr. Wasson declined to give any information regarding his alleged dealings with Mrs. Hayes. When told it was understood he had taken four notes aggregating $125,000 and asked for an explanation he said: "I have nothing to say." He gave the same answer to all other questions.

One note was for $60,000, another for $50,000 and two for $7,500 each it was stated.

The other business men were reported to be holding notes for lesser totals and to be wondering what they will do with them.

Another holder of the "Schwab" notes for the amount of $30,000 was said to be the American Bonded Mortgage Company of New York city.

Experts at Odds on Schwab Signature



Professional chirographists differ widely in their conclusions based on study of these signatures—facsimile reproductions of the genuine signature of Charles M. Schwab, of Mrs. Myrtle Bowman Hayes, accused of forging the great steel master's name to notes totalling $325,000, and one of the alleged spurious signatures.

The upper signature of Mr. Schwab is admittedly genuine. The lower is alleged to have been cleverly imitated by Mrs. Hayes, whose own signature appears in the centre.

Two of three handwriting experts refuse to swear the lower signature is forged. Another David N. Carvalho, says:

"The indorsement on this note does not correspond entirely to the signature authorized by Mr. Schwab. I won't express a definite opinion until many more signatures have been examined."

Another expert says unequivocally the lower Schwab signature is a forgery.

COUNT BONI'S SON WEDS IN PARIS

Paris, May 12 (By the Associated Press)—Count Georges de Castellane, son of the Marquis Boni de Castellane and his former wife, the present Duchess de Talleyrand (Anna Gould), was married today, to Senorita Florinda Fernandez Anchorena, of Buenos Aires, in the church of St. Honore d'Eylau. The ceremony was performed by Vicar Del Foch, who read a message from Cardinal Gasparri, conveying the apostolic benediction of Pope Pius.

BITES MAN'S LIP OFF IN LOVE VENDETTA

Sicilian vendetta is back of a vicious attack, the police say, which Alphonso Piazza made upon his brother in law, Angelo Amoroso.

When police arrived Amoroso's lower lip had been bitten off and two of his lower teeth had been torn out of the jaw.

Piazza was held in $2,500 by Judge Bond in municipal court today for hearing Tuesday on a charge of assault.

Piazza, the police say, accused Amoroso of having stabbed his wife, who was Piazza's sister, in Italy. Mrs. Amoroso subsequently died, but not from the stabbing. Then Amoroso, as the police relate it, lured to him a younger sister of his dead wife, and the vendetta began.

Amoroso fled to this country and lived at No. 30 Maverick street, East Boston. Piazza came later and found six months for Amoroso.

REFUSE TO RELEASE LYMAN SCHOOL BOY

Judge Crosby in Superior Court today dismissed the petition of counsel for Augustus L. Sylvester for a writ of habeas corpus to obtain the release of his 16-year-old son, Lawrence Sylvester, from the Lyman School for Boys, a correctional institution. The boy was sentenced as a delinquent recently by Judge Stone of Cambridge, following his arrest on a charge of breaking and entering.

Mother of Nine Gets Back Her Boiler, Seized in Raid

Mrs. Sarah Hecht, thirty-nine years old, of No. 176 Princeton street, East Boston, has her wash boiler back, so now she can wash again for her nine children.

The boiler was seized as part of a still equipment in a raid on April 25, and later Mrs. Hecht paid $50 fine.

Today she appealed to Judge Barnes for the return of the boiler, claiming she was unable to wash her children's clothes properly without her boiler. He granted the request.

ARCHITECTS GET CONTRACTS FOR 3 SCHOOLS

Mayor Curley today awarded contracts to three architects to draw plans for three new schoolhouses at a total cost of $560,000.

Architect John M. Gray will submit the plans for the $380,000 addition to the Charles Sumner district, West Roxbury, which will be an annex to the intermediate schoolhouse already there.

John F. Cullen, for the $240,000 annex to the Frank V. Thompson schoolhouse in Dorchester and Joseph J. Driscoll for an annext to the Florence Nightingale schoolhouse in Dorchester, to cost $240,000. The architect fee is 6 per cent. of the total cost.

Martino De Matteo was awarded a contract for laying sheet asphalt in Hampden street, Roxbury, from Sherman square, Albany street to Dudley street, for $44,101.85. De Matteo was the only bidder.

Bernard E. Grant Company of Roxbury was given the contract for the repaving of Merchants Row, between State street to North street and South Market street, with pecut granite blocks. The Grant Company were the lowest bidders at $22,370.25.

V. James Grande was awarded a contract for laying recut granite blocks in Melcher street, South Boston, at $12,316.10.

HUSBAND REALLY AN ASSET, SAYS MITZI

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

JUST how much cash value may be placed to the credit of the husband of a popular feminine artist of the stage has always been an unsettled question among men who invest their savings in theatrical ventures. The generally expressed opinion is that husbands should be left at home to look after the babies and do other domestic chores. Let art have its fling without incumbrances, you have been told. And, having been told, you listen intently and hear it repeated.

SO much for the well-known dope as it is so expressively referred to on the sporty page. Possibly the dope isn't running true to form, however, for now comes in unlisted a voice of protest—a challenge to the world that a husband is not only valuable in his own right, but absolutely indispensable to daily comfort and happiness and one of the main props in the artistic scheme of things. So speaks Mitzi, the diminutive and amusing young woman who spreads good cheer through "Minnie an' Me" at the Colonial, and who plays love scenes with her own husband just as if she were doing it for pleasure instead for a box office division that gives her a little the best of the arrangement. Before she steps through the stage door Mitzi is Mrs. Boyd Marshall, the happy spouse of a talented juvenile comedian who mixes music with his other accomplishments and makes it count for something in "Minnie an' Me." If you insist, you may rate him solely as the husband of the bubbling Mitzi, taking his own slim chances with the spotlight and doing his nightly stint with becoming modesty—as a husband should. But if you take Mitzi's words for it, he is the most important member of the company, not even excepting Harold Levey, composer of the score and orchestra director, for whom Mitzi has a professional admiration that is not only beautiful to look upon, but which is highly deserved, for Mr. L. vey has done very well for Mr. Savage's small star in the way of musical composition. Between the musical husband, who plays delightfully and makes love like a perfect stranger, and Mr. Levey, whose main object in life is to provide a glittering star with entrancing melodies, Mitzi appears to be well fortified against any possible harmonic deficiency.

Mitzi Declares a Husband Is More Valuable Than Life Insurance.

COMMUTING AGAIN—Channing Pollock, author of "The Fool," whose holiday that stretch from Boston was interrupted by a sudden call to London and Paris, will resume local operations in another week with a new line of thoughts on human uplift. Mr. Pollock's bi-weekly jaunts between New York and Boston make him the New Haven road's best paying long-distance customer.

WHILE you cannot entirely agree with the Manhattan critic who, enjoying for the first time the Moscow Art Theatre, beat himself upon the breast and cried aloud that he never again wanted to sit before an English-speaking actor, it is only fair to say that the American theatre ought to find an inspiration in the work of these visitors and be made a better medium of dramatic expression. Moscow Art may not teach us all we should like to know, but it has shown us a great deal that is worth seeing—concerted stage action involving fifteen, twenty and twenty-five people with every human unit a perfectly working part of the scene. Ensembles such as the Russians have shown us have not been seen on our dramatic stage in the memory of this generation, though individually the American actor of ability and intelligence would have no difficulty in holding his own with the men from Moscow. If there is superiority in the work of the Moscow Art Theatre players, it is more a matter of training and stage direction than individual skill—a matter of solid, hard discipline. An American company could do as well—but doesn't. This is because there is no great driving force behind the stage direction to compel the subordination of the individual to the general result. The most distinctive impression one gains from an evening with the Russians is the entire absence of any solo spirit on the part of the players—each part is played in complete and harmonious tune with the others. It would seem to recall how often we miss that one essential point in our own drama. A week with the Russians has brought forward two impressive figures—Ivan Moskvin, whose Tsar Fyodor in Tolstoy's play was something that will be remembered for months, and Con'stin Stanislavsky, leading player of the company and one of the most imposing personalities the local stage has ever seen. Of the two, Moskvin undoubtedly made the deeper impression. No matter how you may look upon this imported art of the Russians, with its sombre tone and foreign language, there is both profit and entertainment in an evening with Moskvin.

Ivan Moskvin Makes Himself Most Impressive of Russian Actors.

PURELY PERSONAL.—Edward D. Smith, formerly manager of the Shubert' local enterprises, and more recently manager of A. L. Erlanger's American Theatre in St. Louis, slipped quietly into town yesterday to refund the seventeen glad hand and incidentally make collections on a few backyard accounts. Mr. Smith's next venture will be as manager of the new Biltmore Theatre in Los Angeles.

* * * * * * *

A NEW kind of a press agent tapped modestly on the front door yesterday and ask to lay his wares on the table. "I can't bring my show to Boston," he began, "but Boston can easily hop on a train and go to St. Louis and enjoy that city's Municipal Opera." And Paul Beisman, "advance man" for the city of St. Louis, unrolled a score of more photographic exhibits to prove that the Municipal Theatre in Forest Park, St. Louis, does opera in its own good way—at low prices and gorgeous profits. As the profits belong to the city, it was something of a problem to know what to do with the $24,000 surplus that had piled up during the ten weeks' season two years ago. "Then somebody had a bright idea," explained Mr. Beisman; "a free training school in music for St. Louis boys and girls was suggested, and it was put into operation. Two hundred and fifty enrolled in that school and when Summer came around 36 of them drew $35 a week as chorus girls and chorus men during the season of 1922. It must have been a sound idea because the Municipal Theatre earned $41,000 above expenses last Summer, and this year we want the rest of the world to know all about it and incidentally express a hope that Boston will give us a kindly thought. When you get a day off, drop in and enjoy the lowest-priced opera in the world. We expect to entertain 500,000 St. Louis citizens this Summer, but there'll be lots of room for visitors." Because the mayor of St. Louis and others high in authority in the city councils are proud of the success of their Municipal Theatre, Mr. Beisman has been dispatched on a tour of Eastern cities to explain how easily the thing can be done—all you need is a little energy, a love for the finer things of life and a lot of public pride. St. Louis, it appears, has all these things in abundance, which explains as well as anything why eight to ten thousand people sit in the Municipal Theatre every night for ten weeks. The Municipal Theatre is not run for profit, but its directors have not been able to escape the embarrassment of sudden riches. A new way to spend this season's earnings had to be devised. Six of the most talented and industrious of the 1922 chorus will be given scholarships to enable them to continue a year's study in singing, dancing or acting. "And that," emphasized Mr. Beisman, "is what the city of St. Louis is doing for its own young people."

The cast includes Claire McDowell, Ralph Lewis, Ella Hall, Johnny Harron, Taylor Graves and Jane Morgan. The production is by Emory Johnson.

"Bozo" Getting to Be Real Popular as a Name

Boston seems to be going "Bozo." Meaning that the stage name of Tommy (Bozo) Snyder is getting to be more and more of a household word. The naming of the ape just added to Franklin Park Zoo, "Bozo" is the latest instance of the way that soubriquet has taken hold of the community.

"Bozo," the original, is the star of "Follies of the Day," at the Gayety Theatre. As a comedian and pantomimist he is familiar to Greater Boston theatregoers.

The youngsters have taken up the name with youthful enthusiasm and it would be hard to say how many Boston boys whose family name is snyder are now nicknamed "Bozo" among their playmates.

The ape at Franklin Park, who has just arrived from Africa, is a funny fellow. So is "Bozo," the pantomimist.

Pollock Not Tied to One Rule in Writing

No author writing for the American stage has turned his hand successfully to so many different kinds of entertainment as has Channing Pollock, whose latest play, "The Fool," is now at the Selwyn Theatre.

"The Pit," "Napoleon the Great," "Such a Little Queen," "The Traitor," "Roads of Destiny," "The Sign on the Door," the "Ziegfeld Follies of 1921"—these are widely varying examples of Mr. Pollock's versatility, technical skill and breadth of interest.

Ever since his school days he has lived in the atmosphere of the theatre, as general manager for William A. Brady, as dramatic critic, and as playwright; and perhaps the fact that he married the daughter of a playwright, Edward Marble, has also influenced his career.

"The Rise of Rosie O'Reilly" will be George M. Cohan's contribution to Boston's Summer entertainment, opening at the Tremont May 21.

"The Broken Wing" will be the attraction at the St. James for the week beginning Monday, May 21.

"The Covered Wagon" marks the return to the screen of J. Warren Kerrigan, who was secured by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to play the role of Will Banion, the hero of Emerson Hough's story.

PLAYS THAT REMAIN

Who's Who and What's What at the Theatres, With a Line or Two About the Current Attractions

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

"The Monster" at the Plymouth. (Third week.) Blood curdling melodrama in which the shrieks of the audience are mingled with those of the victims back of the footlights.

"Lightnin'" at the Hollis. (Twenty-first week.) Most popular rural comedy of the generation nearing the end of its local run. Two final weeks in Boston are announced.

Harry Delf in "Sun Showers" at the Wilbur. (Third week.) Summer musical show built around a group of pretty girls and an assortment of spirited dancers.

Mitzi in "Minni an' Me" at the Colonial. (Fifth week.) Fantastic play with music, in which Mitzi has plenty of opportunity to continue cute and lovely and make everybody laugh.

"The Fool" at the Selwyn. (Fourteenth week.) Just plain drama of the more or less solemn variety, with a well placed sermon on the loveliness of the Golden Rule.

"Molly Darling" at the Tremont. (Second week.) Second showing here of Jack Donahue and his dancing feet, to say nothing of the other delights of the performance. The last week.

Jimmie Cooper's "Black and White" show at Waldron's Casino. (Third week.) Something new and daring in burlesque, with two shows rolled into one for Summer purposes. Very jazzy.

"Follies of the Day" with Bozo at the Gayety. (Second week.) Burlesque's inimitable comedian more than holding his own in the rush for hot weather patronage.

"The Affairs of Lady Hamilton" at the Park. (Third week.) Photoplay of English court life in the days of Lord Nelson. A bit scanda-ous, but rather entertaining.

COLONIAL BENEFIT

Ernest Grenier and Archie Birtwell of the Colonial box office staff will be tendered a testimonial by a performance of Mitzi in "Minnie an' Me," on Monday evening, May 21st. The popularity of these disposers of tickets will serve to bring out a large number of their many friends.

BENEFIT AT HOLLIS

Monday night's performance of "Lightnin'" at the Hollis will be given as a testimonial to Joseph P. Cook, business manager, and Vincent Fetherston and William Landrigan of the box office staff. Mr. Fetherston is rounding out thirty-three years of continuous service at the Hollis.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS

Fred Jackson's "A Full House" is the attraction for the coming week at the Somerville Theatre, marking the return of Harry Bond to the leading role. "A Full House" is a farce-comedy of spirited action and breezy dialogue, with many novel situations. Ann Hamilton will appear opposite Mr. Bond.

"Westbound Limited" Tremont Temple — "Soul of the Beast" Loew's State

Lois Wilson Gives Beauty to "Covered Wagon"

The darkey character of the "Oh! Susannah" song was from Alabam', found himself in Louisiana, and was hooked for Oregon. "The Covered Wagon," which will be disclosed at the Majestic beginning May 21st, is a story of Dixie folk trekking to the great Northwest with "Oh! Susannah" shimmering on the banjo and sung lustily by everybody, from the amati boy to the grave and bearded eldera

Lois Wilson

That was probably only a side reason why the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation chose Lois Wilson to play the role of Molly Wingate, the fair driver of a prairie schooner and heroine of "The Covered Wagon." She was an Alabama girl when she went on the stage, though it would be quite too much to attribute her whole artistic excellence to the town made famous by Octavus Roy Cohen. Indeed, Pittsburgh deserves a share, the place of her nativity.

Lois Wilson's career since 1920 is known of all the fans, such outstanding hits as "Manslaughter," "Miss Lulu Bett," "Midsummer Madness" and "What Every Woman Knows" being noteworthy. It shouldn't puzzle anybody that in this picture both Warren Kerrigan and Alan Hale are crazy about her.

Tom Meighan Shines as Football Coach

Tom Meighan a football coach! He is seen in such a role in his latest starring vehicle, "The Ne'er Do Well," which will be shown at Loew's Orpheum Theatre next week. At the opening of the picture, Mr. Meighan is on the side lines at a football game between two of the foremost colleges in the country. A victory for his eleven it a signal for wild excitement. Pandemonium breaks loose, and Meighan and his men are carried from the field on willing shoulders. That night, the usual celebration in honor of victory is held in one of the cafes in town, and it is in here that Mr. Meighan, in the role of Kirk Anthony, meets a certain strange man, and thereby hangs a tale.

Midnight Shows Put "Pep" Into Casino Actors

"There is an extra inspiration to actors and actresses in putting on a midnight show," says Jimmie Cooper. He was referring to the midnight performances which are being given at Waldron's Casino on Wednesday nights by Jimmie Cooper's "Big Black and White" Show. This makes three performances on one day and Cooper was asked whether the company felt like maintaining for a third performance its high rate of speed.

"I will say for myself, and from what I have heard others in the company say," says Cooper, "that there is an additional impetus for the company from several sources. In the first place, there are always several visiting professionals. Playing to other actors is a fine pacemaker. Then, the midnight show audiences have remained to see a performance at midnight, and they seem filled with anticipation of an extra good time, something quite out of the usual. That, also, encouraged the actor and keeps him on his toes."

What Makes Broadway the Great White Way?

Just why Broadway, New York, should be called the Great White Way is more than many persons who have come in contact with this brilliantly lighted lane can understand. Jay Gould, who plays in the musical comedy success, "Molly Darling," has, on more than one occasion, come in contact with the so-called Great White Way, and has some amusing things to say about just what it should be called.

"Why should it be called the Great White Way?" asks Mr. Gould. To whom is it particularly white?

"To the actor who cannot get a job, it is the Great Blight Way.

"To the actor who is a headliner, it is the Great Right Way.

"To the chorus girl who does not get what she wants, it is the Great Slight Way.

"To the theatrical reporter, it is the Great Write Way.

"To the subway factions, it is the Great Fight Way.

"To the thousandths of visitors from the country, it is the Great Sight Way.

"To the inebriates, it is the Great Tight Way.

"To the denizens of the underworld, it is the Great Night Way.

"To the joyous, with money to spend, it is the Great Bright Way."

And there you are.

You Have to Be Bold and Brave in Movies

It takes courage—and a lot of it—to be a successful motion picture actor these days of super thrill in celluloid. Take the case, for instance, of Johnny Harron, brother of the late Bobby Harron. Johnny has an important role in Emory Johnson's melodrama, "Westbound Limited," which will begin an indefinite engagement at Tremont Temple Monday afternoon.

In the striking climax of the drama Harron was required to ride a horse down a rough country road in the black of night and then leap over a towering cliff. It was quite an assignment to ask of a veteran, let alone a youth of brief experience in the movies. At any rate, Harron was grateful to Mr. Johnson for giving him his opportunity and agreed to take the chance, rather than have the scene ruined by the possible bungling of a "double." So off he went on the horse! When it came to the big leap the horse balked. Harron urged him on. Over the cliff they went—rolling over and over in their swift descent. Fortunately, neither horse nor rider was hurt except for some cuts and bruises.

This Prima Donna Started in Johnsonburg, Pa.

As an example of the hard work which is required of a modern prima donna may be mentioned the brief career of Lillian Ring, who plays the prima donna in "Sun Showers" at the Wilbur. Miss Ring was born in Johnsonburg, Pa., and received her first training in Dr. Beato's school of opera in Pittsburgh. After graduating from the school Miss Ring found that she was not proficient in dramatic art and she entered a stock company in Pittsburgh in which she played all kinds of roles. Vaudeville, concert and oratorio claimed her services before she entered upon an operatic career. Her first opportunity came with Donald Brian in "Her Regiment." When Ray Comstock produced "Leave it to Jane" she was cast for the leading part and later she was with "The Right Girl," "Tickle Me" and with Julian Eltinge in "The Elusive Lady."

Lillian Ring.

The retirement of Marie Flynn from the cast of "Sun Showers" gave Miss Ring another opportunity and she was sent to Boston.

Changes Are Announced in Plans at St. James

From the St. James comes the announcement that, owing to the enormous production required of "The Man Who Came Back," this play will not open until Monday, May 28th. The entire cast of the Boston Stock Company, with the exception of Lucille Adams, will be seen in Mr. Brady's drama. Accordingly the week of May 21st will be the farewell week of the regular season of the Boston Stock Company and "The Broken Wing" will be the closing Stage receptions will be held after each performance.

On Monday evening, May 21st, several hundred officers, members of the military societies in New England will witness "The Broken Wing."

MOSCOW ART IN GORKY DRAMA

The dregs of life put under the microscope of an artist proved to be the most interesting, the most gripping, the most disgusting and at the same time sympathy-stirring analysis of what is possible for any one of us so long as we continue in the vagaries of this life. So much for the genius of observation and the gift to transfer it to paper that were Maxim Gorky's in "The Lower Depths," at the Majestic last evening.

Revolting poverty went hand in hand with remarkable philosophy. Intrigue that ended more times than one in murder was on every side.

It does seem unfair that certain of the Moscow Art Theatre cast should be marked for special notice when it is true that every one is so remarkably good for his part. As has been frequently remarked, the ensembles were thrilling. The mob scene in the third act was far more exciting than seems possible without having seen it. Mme. Tchekhova's impersonation of the woman of the streets was so convincing that it made the shivers run up and down your back. The lovely Varvara Bulgakova played Nastasha. Ivan Moskin was the Luka, who was an allegorical Christ. Stanislavsky played the role of Satine.

BETTY ALDEN TELLS OF REUNION LUNCHEON OF SEWING CIRCLE MEMBERS

By BETTY ALDEN.

WHEN some of the 1917 Sewing "Circlers" talked over old times at a reunion luncheon the other day, dark-haired Mrs. Joseph Hoyt, Jr. and Mrs. Lloyd Nichols—who's as blonde as Mrs. Hoyt is dark—were the hostesses.

Of course, when Mrs. Hoyt joined the ranks of the 1917 group she was Miss Alice Seabury, and it was at her new year-round home at Beverly Farms on the North Shore that the luncheon was held.

There's always gossip aplenty for the girls—what with murmurings in the air of weddings and betrothals in each and every Sewing Circle year. And especially have interesting things happened of late to some of the girls of the 1917 group.

"Peppy" Miss Louise Hoar, for instance, very recently sent a perceptible ripple of excitement over the social waves when society learned of her engagement to Christopher G. La Farge. The latter, a Harvard man, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Grant La Farge of New York, the former being a member of the Somerset Club of Boston.

Greeted with every bit as much interest came the news that popular Helen Bennett is now the fiance of Bulkeley Livermore Wells. The wedding is to take place early in June in Baltimore, where the youngest daughter of Stephen Howe has been the happy home for the past year with her sister, Mrs. Tom Coltman (Margaret Bennett.) So that two of the most talked-of betrothals of the entire year came from the ranks of the 1917 girls.

Slender Mrs. "Alex" Tomes, the one-time Elizabeth St. John Whiting, another 1917 member, sees little of Boston since her marriage to the Harvard '13 man, for the young people are now members of the Tuxedo Park colony. Mrs. William Sawin Withing's daughter made a very lovely bride indeed when she walked up the aisle of Emmanuel Church a year ago last October, for she is tall and slim, of perfect blonde type, and having besides an exceptionally sweet smile.

Just a year ago this month another girl, making her debut in 1917, joined the ranks of the "Married Maidens," as the Social Register terms them. It was no other than versatile Mary Sigourney, who's now Mrs. Rochfort Y. Loveband of London, and the proud mamma of a tiny son. The former Mary Sigourney—youngest of Mrs. Henry Sigourney's daughters—could probably dance with more breath-taking skill and ease than almost any other member of the smart set. Grotesque dancing was her forte, and there are few indeed who saw "Now and Then," the Vincent Club show of last Spring, who will forget her marvellous Scarecrow Dance.

And so on down the list.

SUNDAY POPS SEASON'S NOVELTY

The first of the Sunday night Pops is scheduled for tomorrow evening at Symphony Hall. This will be the first time during the thirty-eight seasons of these popular programs that a Sunday concert has been given. The week just closing gives every promise that the present season will outrival all its predecessors in attendance and indicates that the unique blend of light music, superbly performed, refreshments and friendly social intercourse is very much the fashion of the hour.

The program which Agide Jacchia has arranged for the second week, beginning Monday, will include rollope and football songs to be sung by the Harvard Freshman Glee Club.

The Russian Tchaikovsky program for tomorrow night is as follows:

Cortege from "Mlada" ..... Rimsky-Korsakoff
Fantasie, "Roger Overture" ..... Rubenstein
"Knaisreal overture" ..... Rubenstein
Waltz, "Memories" ..... Tchaikovsky
Finale, Fourth symphony ..... Tchaikovsky
Introduction and Dance of Seleucus ..... Glazounow
"Till, Till ..... Arranged by Agide Jacchia
(Solo trumpet, George Mogey Jr.)
Ballet Music from "Prince Igor" ..... Borodin
Song Without Words ..... Tchaikovsky
Overture Solennelle, "1812" ..... Tchaikovsky

TONIGHT'S POP

The Pops concerts in Symphony Hall will close their first week tonight. Agide Jacchia will present the following programs:

Charge of the Hussars ..... Spender
Overture to "William Tell" ..... Rossini
Waltz, "Die Bernadeller" ..... Waldteufel
Dance of the Hours from "La Gioconda" ..... Ponchielli
"Little Suite" ..... Debussy
Procession to the Cathedral ..... Soro
"Liberation" Act 2 ..... Wagner
"Whispering of the Flowers" ..... Blon
Spanish Rhapsody "A night in Seville" ..... Chabrier
Fantasie "Eternity Duettesse" ..... Albeniz
Dubinushka ..... arranged by Agide Jacchia
Solo Trumpet, George Mogey Jr.
Stars and Stripes Forever ..... Sousa

Keith Soloist Has Studied Under Many Masters

Among the young-er American singers Helen Stover has already won a place of esteem and popularity. Miss Stover, an Ohioan by birth, was educated at Miami University. Upon her graduation at the end of her second year, she was awarded the Gold Medal with honors. She will sing at B. F. Keith's next week.

At the Cincinnati College of Music she studied voice with Hans Schroder, harmony and theory with the noted composer, Louis Victor Saar, and piano with Romeo Gorno. She appeared as soloist at that time with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. Upon coming to New York she continued her vocal study with Reford Ryan. With the entry of the United States into the great war Miss Stover abandoned her career of devoting her time to singing for the soldiers and sailors in camps and hospitals under the "Stage Women's War Relief."

Among her important recent appearances are included a concert at which she was soloist with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a number of appearances with the Goldman Concert Band. She will be soloist with the Portland, Ore., Symphony Orchestra in March.

Elephant, Star of Screen, Has His Own Ideas

Real beer looks good even to an elephant nowadays.

Oscar, one of the players in Thomas H. Ince's "Soul of the Beast," the picture at Loew's State next week, proves that he is no camel in one comedy scene. The elephant, wandering about in the woods after escaping from a circus, comes upon a trapper's town and stops to look into the tavern where one trapper is dancing for the benefit of his companions. "Aha," trumpets Oscar, soundlessly, and reaches into the window, lifts out a mug of beer from a table and drains it, setting the mug back on the table. Oscar shows many other marks of intelligence and one that is extremely human. His earnest desire was to keep directly in front of the camera at all times while the pictures was being filmed.

DANCING RECITAL

One of the dancing recitals awaited with interest in Greater Boston will be that of May Annette O'Brien, who will present her pupils and herself in numbers on Saturday evening, May 19, at Bloomfield Hall, Dorchester. An interesting number will be "The Winter Carnival," featuring Virginia Taber as the snow queen. Another sketch, "The Doll Shop," will present the different pupils as Irish, Scotch and French kewpie and sailor dolls.

When "The Covered Wagon" is put on at the Majestic that Famous Players-Lasky special will be running simultaneously in four leading theatres of New York, Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles.

VAUDEVILLE AND PICTURES

ORPHEUM—First showing in Boston of Thomas Meighan in "The Ne'er Do Well," picturization from the popular Rex Beach novel of the same name. It is said to be both romantic and dramatic, and has the support of Lila Lee, who plays the leading feminine role. The vaudeville section is headed by Frank Fay, presenting Frank Fay's fables. Also news and comedy reels.

BOSTON—Reginald Denny in Jack London's "The Abysmal Brute," as the picture feature. The vaudeville is headed by Franklyn Ardell in "The Wife Saver."

MODERN AND BEACON—"The Stranger's Banquet," with Claude Gillingwater and Claire Windsor; also "Dollar Devils," headed by Cullen Landis, Eva Novak and Lydia Knott.

LANCASTER—"The White Flower," with Betty Compson, and "My American Wife," featuring Gloria Swanson, for three days. Beginning Thursday, "Mighty Lak' a Rose" and Jackie Coogan in "Jackie."

OLYMPIA—Harold Lloyd in "Safety Last" and Will Rogers in "Fruits of Faith." Also five acts of vaudeville.

SCOLLAY SQ.—"Within the Law," with Norma Talmadge, and "Bobby" Vernon comedy, "Second Childhood." Also five acts of vaudeville.

HOWARD—(Burlesque) "Ginger Snappy" revue, with Dave Shafkin and Vivian Lawrence in the leading roles. Also vaudeville features and news and comedy reels.

LOEW'S STATE—"Soul of the Beast," a Thomas A. Ince production, with Madge Bellamy in the leading role; also introducing Oscar a well-trained and elaborately filmed elephant. The companion picture will show Walter Hiers in "Sixty Cents an Hour," announced as a rapid-fire comedy. Also news and comedy reels.

CENTRAL SQ.—Pola Negri in "Bella Donna" and Al St. John in "The Third Alarm," for three days. Also five vaudeville acts.

STRAND—Pola Negri in "Bella Donna," also "An Old-Fashioned Flapper" and a Christie comedy, "The Chased Bride," for three days.

CODMAN SQ.—"Brass," a feature film on a modern domestic problem, and Buster Keaton in "The Electric House," for three days only.

CAPITOL—Harold Lloyd in "Safety Last," Will Rogers in "Fruits of Faith," and "The Bashful Suitor."

BOWDOIN SQ.—Pola Negri in "Mad Love" and the William Fox production, "Who Are My Parents." Also five acts of vaudeville.

SOMERVILLE FROLICS

The Somerville Theatre management is making preparations for the early production of a Somerville Theatre frolics in which a large number of talented amateurs recruited from that city will take part. The production will be staged immediately after the close of the regular season. Those desiring to participate may make a personal application to Manager McArdle at the theatre.

Sydney Greensmith to Recite Shakespeare

Sydney Greenstreet, who plays fairy godfather to Mitzi's stage romance in "Minnie an' Me" at the Colonial, will desert musical comedy for the classics next Thursday. For an hour on that afternoon, before the students of Boston University, Greenstreet will give "Fragments from Shakespeare," with scenes and speeches from "Julius Caesar," "Henry V," and "As You Like It."

It is ten years since this comedian whom Sir Herbert Tree a dozen years ago pronounced "the greatest unstarred star on the English stage," has been heard in Shakespeare by a Boston audience.

When first Mr. Greenstreet came to America he appeared here with Margaret Anglin in Shakespearean repertoire, and was seen as Touchstone, Toby Belch, and Falstaff. It was a shock to his classical following when four seasons ago Mr. Greenstreet suddenly appeared as a musical comedy butler.

He will be introduced to the student body of Boston University, on Thursday, by Professor Joseph R. Taylor.

STATE BALLROOM

Dancing to the beautiful strains of good music, in an auditorium thoroughly equipped for ballroom dancing is a treat always enjoyed at the State Ballroom. This dancing pavilion holds its regular dansants on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings of each week. The orchestra is under the direction of the Lambert brothers.

Hub-Bub
STORIES OF BOSTON TOWN
By Jo Swerling

FOR THREE YEARS HAROLD SMART HAS BEEN TIED TO his bed at Chelsea Hospital. But he has a jolly time of it listening in on the radio and watching the ships that come and go in Boston harbor. Once he went out on a ship with a lot of other boys. Some of them never came back.

A PRISONER OF WAR

Today is National Hospital Day. It is a day dedicated to the American prisoners of war. There are no more prisoners of war, you say. All the prisoners have been released. The war is over.

You are quite mistaken. There are still many prisoners of war—hundreds of them. For many of them, death can be the only release. These prisoners are not held in pens or stockades in a foreign land. They are held right here in the United States—right here in Boston.

They are wounded soldiers.

These boys are prisoners of war just as much as though outside of their wards in the various hospitals stand sentries with rifles. People forget. To most of us the war is just a memory. To these prisoners of war in the military hospitals it is still a reality. Every time the invalided boys move in their beds of pain they are reminded of the war that the public has forgotten.

The boys who sleep under the poppies of France are lucky. For them the war is over.

For three years Harold Smart of Bangor, Me., has been a prisoner of war in the military hospital at Chelsea. He was never even wounded. But night after night, in the soggy trenches in France, he slept on the damp earth, and when time came to muster out the young doughboy he couldn't move.

Arthritis, the doctor calls it. It is a disease which cramps practically every muscle in the body—a superrheumatism which cripples the victim more effectively than a straitjacket.

Not Out of Bed In 37 Months.

Smart is only a kid. He was twenty-one years old when, thirty-seven months ago, he was taken to the hospital in Chelsea. Since then he has never for a moment gotten out of his bed. For 26,640 hours he has stayed in bed, and only God knows when he will be permitted to rise. Every hour has been an hour of pain. Yet there hasn't been one moment in which Smart has voiced his pain, or expressed anything but the highest hope and courage.

He is the comedian, the Pagliacci of the hospital. More fortunate prisoners of war gather about his bed and listen to him as he chats away. The only thing about Smart that isn't paralyzed is his wit and his indomitable spirit. The hospital people have placed him in a ward which gives him a good view of Boston Harbor. Propped up on his pillows, he can see the ships as they come and go in the harbor. It reminds him of a trip he took on a big ship one day, together with several hundred of his buddies. That is the only time when he becomes sad—when he thinks of that ship, and of the many who didn't make the return trip home.

On a little table alongside his cot is a bowl of goldfish. He loves to watch them. They wiggle around so rapidly. They have such ease of movement. Watching them swim around, he is able to forget that he cannot move.

Every day his nurse comes and reads to him. He is pathetically interested in the box scores. Before arthritis tied him into a human knot, he was quite a baseball player himself, with vague ambitions to become a big league player some day.

Every day they clamp radio receivers to his ears, and he listens to WGA, WNAC, WTG, KDKA, WJZ, YEZ and WEAF.

Shows Them They're Not Forgotten.

Now you see, this boy has a jolly time of it in his bed at Chelsea. For that reason, of course, it won't be necessary for you to do any worrying. Today is National Hospital Day. The idea of fixing one such day each year is to remind you all that we still have prisoners of war. If some of you feel like visiting the hospital where your soldiers are being taken care of, nobody will object. If you want to bring flowers, books, eats and other little gifts, there are no rules to prevent you.

It isn't compulsory, mind you. But try it. Visit a hospital today. Show these boys that they haven't been forgotten. They're prisoners. Don't make them feel like pariahs.

JUMPS FOR BALL; MAY LOSE LIFE

Jumping from an automobile truck on Winter street today to pick up a 10-cent rubber ball may cost the life of Stephen J. Eagan, fifty-five years old, of No. 24 Mercer street, South Boston.

Eagan saw the ball in front of No. 27 Winter street. He jumped from the moving truck, slipped, and fell under the rear wheel.

He received a broken leg, punctured lung and multiple bruises. He was taken to the Haymarket square relief hospital.

The truck was operated by Frank Gustin of No. 379 K street, South Boston and is owned by Philip Butler & Sons of Somerville.

Eagan wanted the ball to take home to his children.

TRAGEDY FAKED AS EYE TEST

College Experiment Shows Unreliability of Witnesses' Testimony

Fifty students in Professor Milton J. Schlagenhauf's class in psychology at Northeastern University were for a moment horror stricken when a shot rang out in the class room and William Daniels fell to the floor apparently dead.

James McCool, another student, who appeared to have fired the shot, stood for an instant as though dazed, then turned and fled as the other students surged toward the prostrate Daniels. They picked him up and dragged him from the room.

SHOT IS FIRED.

The "shooting" was preceded by an altercation outside the classroom, when suddenly the door burst open and Daniels dashed into the room, closely followed by McCool holding what appeared to be a blunt instrument at Daniels' hip.

The instrument held by McCool was a banana. The shot was fired from the rear of the room. Written reports by students of everything that occurred proved to the satisfaction of Professor Schlagenhauf that testimony and descriptions by eye-witnesses of unexpected events may be wholly worthless as court evidence.

STAGED AS TEST.

When the students started to pursue McCool, Professor Schlagenhauf held up his hand:

"Gentlemen," he said, "in court a short time ago we saw a witness swear positively that he could describe everything that happened at a burglary that took less than three minutes. This little incident was staged to test the value of such testimony.

"This happening has taken less than three minutes. Please write a report of everything that has occurred.

Out of fifty students in the room all but three insisted that they saw a revolver. None actually identified the weapon. Many said they saw the flash from the banana in McCool's hand and some said they saw it smoke.

Only one man in the class noticed that the shot was fired from the rear of the room. That man was John F. Pierce, a senior, and correspondent for a Boston newspaper.

DRYDOCK SHOOTING REMAINS MYSTERY

The wounding of Peter Milewski, Western Union messenger, near the naval drydock reservation, South Boston, remains a mystery, despite an investigation by local naval officials.

In a report filed today Commandant Aid, I. H. Mayfield states, "No definite conclusion could be reached as to how or by whom the would was inflicted. Medical officers of the army and navy who examined the wound have been unable to state that the would is a gunshot wound at all.

"All circumstances tend to show the wound was not inflicted by any member of the marine guard."

LANDLORD DEMANDED RENT WITH A HAMMER

Lee G. Ayoub of No. 6 Oak place, South End, proprietor of a store at Harrison avenue and Tyler street, was sentenced today to two months in jail for assault on Lee Sing, a Chinaman, in Municipal Court. He appealed. Sing charged Ayoub came to his room demanding rent money and that, when he refused to pay Aloub struck him in the eye and on the head with a hammer. Ayoub claimed Sing hit him over the head with an opium pipe. Patrolman Frank Sullivan arrested Ayoub while he was holding a hammer.

A ROSE OF LOVE

Dedicated to the Mothers of Mass.

By Augustus Edward White

I wore a red rose on day
When all the world was song and play
A rose of love for Mother dear
The sweetest name a child can hear
And Daddy took me on his knee
And kissed me so tenderly
And said said we'll promise, you and I,
As swift the years go rushing by,
we'll wear a rose in May each year
A rose of love, for Mother dear.

I wore a red rose one day,
A year and more had passed away
And now I knew a mother's care
A mother's love, a mother's prayer.
Her words of gentle sympathy,
Her joy, when fortune smiled on me.
Her worries, hopes, her griefs, her fears,
Her guiding hand, through smiles and tears.
No social emblem, nor trophy of power
Would I wear with more pride
Than that sweet little flower.

I wore a white rose one day
A year and more had passed away
And now I knew a mother's care
A mother's love, a mother's prayer.
Her words of gentle sympathy,
Her joy, when fortune smiled on me.
Her worries, hopes, her griefs, her fears,
Her guiding hand, through smiles and tears.
No social emblem, nor trophy of power
Would I wear with more pride
Than that sweet little flower.

I wore a white rose one day
When tim had touched my hair with gra..
My bride of twenty years ago
Now wears a flower as white as snow.
And so we comfort one another
On this sweet day, the day of Mother.
For al you did, for all you gave.
Sons day we'll know, beyond the graves.
Wife and daughter, father and son.
We honor the day with hearts as one
Two roses white, two roses red.
For you the living, for you the dead.

CITY PLANS FOR BIG "MOTHERS' DAY" PARADE

"Mother" will be honored tomorrow.

The greatest observance of the day in the history of the city is scheduled.

Barring wet weather there will be a parade with more than 25,000 marchers with the Gold Star Mothers holding the place of honor. The arrangements are in charge of the American Legion and Volunteers of America.

This will be followed by a mass meeting on the Common at which Governor Cox, Mayor Curley, Maude Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers, Mrs. Alice H. Parker, national president of the Women's Relief Corps and others will speak. Mary Carr, noted movie star, who plays mother roles in the movies, and who is the mother of six children of her own, will be a guest of honor.

As in years past white blossoms will be worn by those whose mothers are dead and red flowers by those whose mothers are living.

URGE OWNERS TO HALT RENT BOOST

Joseph and Angelina Di Nunzio will today receive in the mail an appeal to suspend the rent boost of $10 a month ordered for fourteen of their sixteen tenants in the two four-story brick apartments at Nos. 4 and 6 Ellsworth avenue, Cambridge, until he tenants find another place in which to live.

Two years ago the rent was $45 for five-rooms and $50 for six-room suites. It is now $55 and $60. Mr. and Mrs. DiNunzio, recent owners, now demand $10 more per apartment.

The DiNunzios bought it from the St. Mary Associates for $54,600. They have an equity of $8,000.

The Commission on the Necessaries of Life found today that the new rent boost would give the DiNunzios a net income of about $4,000 a year.

BARES ROW IN NICHOLS FAMILY

Chauffeur Who Disappeared With Wool Man's Wife the Cause of Many Quarrels

Clarence Foster, dapper chauffeur who disappeared last Tuesday at the time Mrs. Ruth Buckingham Nichols of Wellesley Hills, wife of John H. Nichols, Boston wool merchant, went away, was the cause of many bitter quarrels in the Nichols family, it was learned today.

The day before Foster drove away from the Nichols home, taking Mrs Nichols and two of the Nichols children, Peggy and Barbara, he was the centre of what is described as the bitterest quarrel of a long series in the Nichols home.

Mr. Nichols, friends say, had decided there could be no happiness in his home while the chauffeur was there, and so he discharged Foster.

Mrs. Nichols objected to the discharge of Foster and demanded her husband take him back. Nichols refused.

BEGINS SEARCH.

The following morning Nichols left for his office, as usual. Then came the news that Foster had come back and had driven away in the Nichols automobile, taking Mrs. Nichols and two of the Nichols children.

Private detectives, engaged to watch Foster's movements, sent word to Nichols, who rushed to Wellesley Hills. A search was started at once for the missing pair and the children.

Foster left the employ of Nichols a month ago, but returned to work there a week later, according to Joseph Ryan, who shared a room with the chauffeur at No. 1287 Commonwealth avenue.

Ryan said today he saw Foster Thursday night for about five minutes. He told Ryan detectives had made accusations against him. Detectives visited the Ryan-Foster room yesterday.

Foster, who has a home at No. 1287 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, has had an unusual series of experiences with women, according to court records. In 1909 he married a Lynn woman, Ida M. Foster, with whom he lived in Lynn and Boston a number of years.

For a time they were happy. Then, according to the charges of the wife, trouble started. Things went from bad to worse and she finally filed suit for divorce, charging Foster with cruel and abusive treatment and unfaithfulness.

MARRIAGE ANNULLED.

The case was heard before Judge Fox and, on February 2, 1917, Mrs. Foster was granted a decree. One child, Viola M. Foster, was born of that marriage. The child was given to the mother.

The scene then shifted to Putnam, Ct. There Foster on November 30 1917, married again and shortly afterward went overseas with the American forces. He wrote tender love letters to his second wife, Elin J. Foster, and her heart swelled up with joy as she read these love missives from her soldier husband.

A nurse living with Foster's wife while he was away, also received letters from Foster. Came a clash between her and Elin and the latter told her that she was not legally married to Clarence.

NO TRACE OF WIFE

Investigation started and the outcome was the filing of an action in the Suffolk County Court for annulment of the marriage. Judge Hall heard the story of Elin and ordered the decree annulled on the ground that Foster could not legally marry under the laws of Massachusetts.

Foster and Elin lived for some months at the Commonwealth avenue address which he now calls his home.

Detectives in the employ of Nichols are continuing their search today for Mrs. Nichols and the two children.

WINS BATTLE OVER OWN CHILDREN

MRS. MERRITHEW AND CHILDREN

Mrs. Lillian Merrithew, formerly the wife of George Gabraith of Everett, has won the right to prove herself capable of caring for her own children. The latter are shown below. They are, left to right, Violet and Cathleen.

TRAIL MISSING GIRL TO SOUTH BOSTON HOUSE

Declaring that their eighteen-year-old daughter, Mary, is being barbored in a house at D and Fourth streets, South Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Francesco Calliri, of No. 27 Nonquit street, Dorchester, enlisted the aid of the police of the Athens street station and with two patrolmen searched the house for the missing girl.

Although the search was fruitless, the parents are still convinced that their daughter is staying at the house, but had gone out for the evening. The woman who occupies the house admitted that the girl had been there for several days, but insisted that she had left recently.

Mary Calliri

Mary, her parents say, is an actress, has a bank account, and owns the brick block in which the family lives. She disappeared last Monday following her father's mandate that she discontinue to stay out later than 10 o'clock evenings.

Mr. and Mrs. Calliri fear that now the girl will flee to New York with a young man.

New York—Ten carloads of calcium arsenate, for combating the cotton weevil in the cotton fields, and sufficient to cover 15,000 acres, were destroyed today in a fire which burned the storehouse of the Chipman Chemical Engineering Company at Bound Brook, N. J.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTERS REUNITED

Mrs. Lillian Merrithew of Everett, twenty-three years old, of County Tyrone, Ireland, and her two children, Kathleen, eight, and Violet, five, were reunited today.

The reunion, a happy one, after three months' separation, took place at the offices of the Children's Aid Society in the Charity building.

Mrs. Merrithew emerged with fling colors from two court struggles, in which she was arrayed against the State, the father of her children and her husband's mother.

She established her right to live as mother and wife with her children and her husband, George Merrithew. Merrithew remains loyal it spite of the story she bared of a school-girl elopement with George Galbraith in Ireland.

Galbraith, father of the little girls, had her arrested for bigamy. The Probate Court decided there was no evidence she ever married him.

"My mother-in-law, Mrs. Merrithew, of Charlestown, is to blame," said Lillian Merrithew today. "She urged Galbraith to have me arrested for bigamy. They took my children while I was away.

"As a school girl in County Tyrone I met George Galbraith. I was very young and we went away together. There was no ceremony. Later we came to America and we disagreed after six years.

"Two years ago I met George Merrithew. He has known everything and remains loyal to me and affectionate toward my children. I feel I've been given a clean slate in court."

It was alleged that Mrs. Merrithew, whose maiden name was Lillian Pearl Clark, was a servant in the home of Galbraith's father, a wealthy manufacturer, when they eloped.

ACCUSED BY 'WOMAN PATRIOT'

Periodical Headed by Hub Matrons Demands Expulsion of Propagandists

The Woman Patriot, a national semi-monthly, published through support of Boston women, charges that Lord Robert Cecil was brought to the United States by the Foreign Policy Association to help defeat the present policy of the American government.

Mrs. B. L. Robinson.

Mrs. James M Codman.

This publication, through Miss Mary G. Kilbreth of Boston, who is the president of the publishing company, recently sent a letter to President Harding, urging the strict enforcement of the Logan act.

This statute gives the government power to expel persons engaged in "any political correspondence or intercourse with foreign governments or their agents—to defeat the measures of the government of the United States."

Mrs. Randolph Frothingham.

Lord Robert Cecil, the publication declares, was doing just that by advocating the entry of the United States in the League of Nations.

The letter sent by Miss Kilbreth asserts that the rigid enforcement of the Logan act "would protect us as well from such itinerant political meddlers as Maude Royden, Lord Robert Cecil, Lady Astor, Fraulein Bauer, etc., as well as from dangerous revolutionists."

Miss Kilbreth's stand had the support of Mrs. B. L. Robinson of Cambridge, vice president of the Woman Patriot; Mrs. Randolph Frothingham of Boston, the treasurer, and Mrs James M. Codman of Brookline, one of the stockholders.

The declaration of the publication and subsequent letter caused considerable stir in diplomatic circles in Washington, where the Woman Patriot has headquarters.

Shortly after the Woman Patriot made its charge came frequent repeated rumors that the visit of the English statesman was cut short because of the criticisms of the magazine, Republican National Committee and Chairman Porter of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

'SHOT AT TWICE,' WIFE TELEPHONES POLICE

Lawrence, May 12.—Mrs. Mary Elias telephoned the police today that her husband, John, had shot at her twice during a quarrel over the ownership of their home. The police are guarding Mrs. Elias and hunting for her husband.

The two have been separated three years. Mrs. Elias said that John came to her home at No. 379 Elm street, at 3 a. m. Finally, she said, he drew a revolver and fired as she fled into the kitchen. Then he left. Mrs. Elias said his final threat was: "If you don't die, I'll come back and kill you."

At a concert in our church one Sunday evening, I, with two other ladies, took up the collection in the gallery. A man sitting on an end seat had placed his hat—a stiff derby—in the aisle. As I was going on ahead to another pew, I noticed the hat. I stepped back and it was with great difficulty that it was pulled off. Everyone around was provided with lighter and smaller hats and I felt so embarrassed I could cheerfully crawl in my self.

Rain Halts Braves-Cardinals Contest

MITCHMEN DRAW A LAY-OFF

By NICK FLATLEY.

The battling Braves, feeling a whole lot better after hopping off the path of defeat were praying for the rope to one of the ninth leaguespot in last year's baseball history. You may remember it's true anyhow that in the initial series with the Cardinals the Mitchmen went cuckoo and knocked the Westerners all around a purple ball field.

They smeared 'em in Saint Looey and they continued the process in Wigwam. Three wreaths in a row. That's the one and thing in baseball referred to by people [illegible] as a streak. [illegible] them and [illegible]

They Will Make It Warm for the Pitchers

It's here that they will raise a rumpus. Any time for Mitchell or one of his chatterboxes to set it. They don't even mind Will Wortman's [illegible] flag dropped. Last one got in the [illegible] and [illegible] have [illegible] a million to [illegible]. The Braves are not going to [illegible] they are going to [illegible] about

The Cards [illegible] that if he was going a bit further [illegible] with [illegible] he might get [illegible] [illegible] but [illegible] has the most [illegible] [illegible] while the experts [illegible] that the Cardinals always manage to [illegible] somewhere in the running and [illegible] run as no powerfully equipped [illegible] a little run of luck one time or all will [illegible] about to a pennant.

The Cards [illegible] the same ball club that swept off so smartly. They have made over a few but assuming [illegible] they were in the fold and run the Braves has been swept. They are going again as if they meant it.

Braves Looked Good In Final Red Joust

Seeing the Reds in the altogether was [illegible] meeting for the arrival of the Rickeys, even though our noble athletes did almost toss the tilt away in the last chapter. Ancient Babe Marquard unfurled another remarkable game, and really shouldn't have had the slight it credit. But an error in the ninth let one marker trickle over, after two of them had manufactured in many others in the opening stanza.

Then the Babe made his only bad move of the afternoon, taking a long enough windup to let Sammy Lohne steal home with the [illegible] run. It didn't make much difference, but it was a mighty good lesson on the advantages of [illegible] watchfulness.

KOTSONORAS TAKES UP PESEK'S MAT CHALLENGE FOR BOUT

CHAMPIONS SIGNED UP TO MEET NEXT WEEK

George Kotsonaros, the Greek champion, versus John Pesek, the Nebraska tiger, best two falls in three to a positive finish, is the main attraction reads up at the Howard management's weekly show at the Grand Opera House Thursday night.

Last week Pesek, in a letter to Boston papers, stated that he wished to meet any three of the grapplers that have been appearing in Boston this season and agree to beat them all in one hour.

The Howard management have placed a ban on these kind of matches and couldn't see this limit match at all.

Upon reading this challenge, George Kotsonaros, the Greek champion, was right up in arms. "I don't want any handicap match; neither do I want any other men to help me in my mat battles," said the Greek.

George Kotsonaros

"Give me this tiger in a finish match, best two falls in three to win and I will show him I don't need any hour handicap or two other men to help me win. Make the match winner take all and the sooner it comes off the better I will like it."

Those who saw the last bout between these two pronounced it the greatest wrestling match ever witnessed in Boston. Pesek won after one hour and forty-seven minutes of the toughest kind of mauling.

His manager, who sat at the ringside, was the most scared man in the Grand Opera House. He had visions of his pupil being laid in the dust, but Pesek, after Manager Emaly put a double wallop on Kotsonaros, throwing the Greek on his head, stunned him so he was unable to continue.

There are very few grapplers today who will take a chance with Pesek, as he seems to have too much speed and class for the most of the heavies.

Just how much the beating he received at the hands of Ed Lewis will affect him in his match here remains to be seen, but when two such mat luminaries as Kotsonaros meet the fans get what they want to see and that is a real contest between two men who are game to the core.

This event will be preceded by two high class preliminaries. Sam Smith will referee all the bouts.

DARTMOUTH TENNIS TEAM DEFEATS PENN

Hanover, N. H., May 12 — Dartmouth's tennis team defeated Pennsylvania, 5-1, in a perfect Green athletic day before the Prom crowd. Howe of Dartmouth defeated Morgan, Penn captain in the singles.

Yale plays Dartmouth today.

Summary:

Howe, Dartmouth, defeated Morgan, Penn, 6-4, 6-4.

FRUZZETTI TO BOX TANSEY AT ARENA

Much brilliance has been added to the program of four ten-round bouts which the Arena A. C. has arranged for Monday night at the Boston Arena by the elimination of Jimmy Glynn of Roxbury out of his match with Young Tansey and the substituting of Jimmy Fruzzetti of Brockton as opponent for Tansey.

Jimmy Fruzzetti

Fruzzetti and Tansey present a match in which there is bound to be interest. Fruzzetti has been up in the local ranks for a couple of years, while Tansey is a new arrival.

The Roxbury lad seems destined for greater things. He has grown from a flyweight to a lightweight and his boxing has improved as his body has grown.

Tansey is hard to defeat. Pat Fruzzetti, rugged and experienced, will make the youngster keep going if he will be successful.

The rest of the card arranged is: Lew Paulas of Salt Lake City battles Red Chapman of Worcester; Willie Cradwell of Somerville meets Clonie Tait, Canadian lightweight champion, and Frankie Culli of Brockton battles Rocky Smith of New York.

HORSE RACING

$50,000 Preakness Stakes Opening Feature at Pimlico Today. Kentucky Derby Next Week

By GUS DALY

The Preakness Stakes of $50,000, richest of all events for three-year-olds in this country excepting the Kentucky Derby, is decided today at Pimlico's closing day. It will bring to the post the best that turfdom has offered in any event during the last decade. Fully twenty high-class youngsters are expected to contest for this rich prize.

Gus Daly.

Wilderness and Enchantment are probable nonstarters, but there will be horses facing the barrier in this classic representing $1,000,000 in equine value.

As Pimlico closes its season of eleven days of racing, Louisville, Ky., will usher in its initial meet of the year with the running of the annual $10,000 Clark Handicap for three-year-olds and up.

That beloved racer, Exterminator, will be an absentee having broken down badly, nevertheless a large field of the best horses in training are slated for action, with a fair sprinkling of Eastern entrants.

Matt Byrnes, one of the oldest and greatest trainers of American thoroughbreds, will take up active work once more after years of retirement. During his long career he trained three Suburban Handicap winners, Pierre Lorrilard's Iroquois in 1885, James B. Haggin's Salvator 1890, and Mate in 1894 & Montana in 1892.

The horses of the Rancocas stable to date have not been showing their true form. A week more of good racing weather should just about season them for their best efforts.

When Jane Gross raced a winning mile at Pimlico recently in 1.37 3-5, beating Sally's Aunt, at 1 mile the track record of 1.36, it appears to have taken a lot out of them both, for June and Sally were both beaten off in their next starts.

James Rowe, trainer of the great colt, Enchantment, gives assurance that, barring accident, the latter will surely start in the Kentucky Derby.

He emphatically denies the rumor that the colt has gone wrong.

Miss Star showed when she reeled off 5¼ furlongs in 1:05, a track record at Jamaica recently, her first trip out this season, a sparkling performance

If the track is heavy for the Preakness at Pimlico today J. S. Cosden's Martindale will be a hard horse to catch and beat home.

The first engagement of August Belmont's handsome colt, Messenger, son of Fair Play, was great disappointment and way below the form shown in his spectacular trials this Spring.

John Hertz, head of the Chicago Taxicab Company and at one time a former newspaper sports writer, has bought of J. D. and O. H. Keene the colt Chittagong, a Kentucky Derby eligible; price paid $60,000.

LAWRENCE TEAM OPENS WITH A VICTORY

Lawrence, May 12—A sensational ninth inning rally by the Lawrence Independents in the opening home game of the Greater Boston Twilight League at O'Sullivan Park, brought victory to the local team over the Reading Town team by a score of 5 to 4.

With the score 4 to 2 against them, the locals knocked a single [illegible] and then [illegible] retired and tied the score. Andrews relieved C. Doucette at the point but a sacrifice and an error by Pierce, with two out, allowed the winning run to score.

Costly errors in the fifth and sixth innings gave Reading its two runs. Dunham's hitting featured the game, his homer in the fifth put his team in the running, and his double in the ninth sent in the tying [illegible] to score for deciding tally a moment later.

The game abounded with sensational fielding, the local infield featuring with three lightning double plays.

BOSTON COLLEGE HOPES TO WIN MEET TODAY

Boston College has twenty nine men entered in the Eastern Intercollegiate track meet at Springfield today and hopes to carry off the honors. In the past three years, the Eagle flyers have come out on top every time, and there is a good chance that Hyder's men will repeat today.

Boston College undoubtedly would run away with the meet were it not deprived of the services of Low, Welch and Kirley. Low is ill, Welch [illegible] and Kirley will not be eligible to wear the Eagle colors until next Fall.

In spite of the loss of these three stars, Boston should score in the neighborhood of forty points. Three speedy Eagles—Forrest, Sullivan and [illegible] are entered in each and there is a good chance that at least one of them will place in the first [illegible].

With Herdic, Mullen and Murphy in the high hurdles, Boston should clean up in this event. In the low hurdles, Herdic and J. F. Sullivan entered and the first two places.

Cavanaugh is picked to win the mile. Tierney of Holy Cross will probably land the 440, with Dillon and [illegible] finishing close behind.

In the high jump, Mullen and Fahive ought to bring several more points to Boston. Captain Billy Nolan will be ready to do his bit in the broad jump, although he may be handicapped owing to the fact that he has only recently recovered from a bad leg muscle bruise.

Forrest and Sullivan will also [illegible] and Ryder are in fine form, and should place with the first three.

The following Eagle men will take part in the meet:

Dan Donovan, Joe Sullivan, Frank Kelley, Arthur Forrest, Frank White, Charlie Foley, Paul Dillon, Jim Hickey, Gerald O'Connor, Bob Merrick, John Mann, Jerry Murphy, Edmund Murphy, Frank Ivra, Pat Mahoney, Tom Cavanaugh, Ed Carey, George Desmond, Sullivan, Brown, Dillon, Howard Dempsey, George Woodey, Clarence Fahive, James Fahive, Tom Walsh, John Mulhearn, Joe McManus, Lawrence Mullen, Captain "Billy" Nolan.

Coach Ryder, Graduate Manager Frank Reynolds, Manager Mesk[illegible] and Le Blanc, accompanied the athletes.

EASTERN LEAGUE

Worcester 8, Bridgeport 6.
Hartford 3, New Haven 2.
Springfield 4, Waterbury 3.
Albany 6, Pittsfield 4 (11 innings).

SCHOOLBOYS

Boston School Athletes May Compete in Massachusetts Meet on June 2.

By FRED C. LANE.

A truce has been declared between the Boston High School athletic officials and those governing the Massachusetts High School Athletic Association. The schoolboy athletes of Boston are no longer the victims of this [illegible] has raged for two long years.

Permission for the athletes of our Boston High Schools to compete in the third annual outdoor track meet of the Massachusetts High School Athletic Association, slated for the Stadium on June 2, is one of the best [illegible] that of the Boston street office in months.

Boys of the calibre of Arnold Rumpf of Commerce, Ed. McKillip of English High and Gordon Clarke of Hyde Park are now eligible to compete with the stars of Medford, Newton, Boston College High and other schools famous for track athletes.

This year has been a banner one in track circles. More [illegible] has gained prominence on the track this year than any before on record. Boston is on the road to lost laurels.

Fred C. Lane

The fame of the three high schools represented by these youngsters will be given added glory. It is evident that about the time the indoor meet of the M. H. A. A. will take place, permision will also be granted to [illegible] take part.

The Harvard Athletic Association has taken a hand in promoting [illegible] They have [illegible] with the [illegible] of the State [illegible] to [illegible] Boston's high [illegible]

The unsettled manner in which the teams of the North Shore League [illegible] games [illegible] causing the fans of that district to [illegible] interest in baseball [illegible] a result not many games [illegible] never have been played.

For instance, there are teams in the North Shore League that have played six games to date. There are three teams in this league that have played only three. Rain has caused [illegible] postponement. It would be well for those who pay their games out of schedule to recall the condition of the standing at the close of last season.

To just such conditions as exist today was attributed the mixup. The officials of the league should take a hand and correct a fault now in its infancy before it grows into something serious.

Filene Bowlers Win American Cup

Filene's crack bowlers romped away with the American Association silver bowling trophy again this year, capturing the second leg on the beautiful cup by a small margin of six points over the C. F. Hovey team.

For the second year Filene's are the retail bowling champions of New England, and Harry Kirlard, single pearl to bring the claim against any other store in New England.

The league closed a most successful season of 22 weeks with the twelve teams jockeying for position from week to week, although Filene's have led the pace since mid-season. Summerfields, Wm. Leavens Co. and E. T. Gray Co., three new comers into the league, landed in the prize money field and Houghton-Dutton Co. will also collect.

Capt. Kirkland of Filene's rolled a steady game all season and cops the high average prize with 95 while Roberts, Summerfields, with 339, tops the high three string list. Pung, Wm. Leavens Co., was the star single bowler with 134.

Filene's took both team prizes with 531 for high single and 1448 for [illegible] team three string.

The Retail Store League looks for a bigger and better season next year and undoubtedly a number of new teams and new faces will be on the alleys in 1923-1924.

The success of the new teams will tend to spur other stores to action and the American is gladly co-operating in making the favorite Winter sport league a success.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

Don't fall for offerings of German municipal bonds now flooding the mails.

Here is a typical offering, broadcast in a reload-black circular by an outfit calling themselves "investment bankers" and Philadelphia: "An unusual speculative opportunity. New issues of leading German municipalities bearing 8 per cent. interest, price, par value $119,000. Today's price $39.50."

What fool would want a bond "cheaper" than that? Only Germany has taken to paying off bonds in marks of the present-day value. For $1 you can obtain 1,000 marks. For $39.50 you would therefore buy 3,951,500 marks. You will thus see that offering you $119,000 "par-par" value of mark bonds is not such a tremendous bargain, seeing that the German mark used to be worth almost 25 cents.

One word more. "The German government's attempt to keep up the price of marks, while at the same time dumping hundreds of billions additional marks into circulation every week, is the most fantastic performance ever indulged in by a supposedly competent administration. That performance is on a par with other actions of the German authorities. Their whole financial operations have recently been nothing but ultimate disaster.

Ivy Lee is the latest American to return from Europe with a very high opinion of Italy's dictator, Mussolini, with whom he had a long talk. Mr. Lee also spent two hours with Stinnes who, instead of being as secretive and mum as he is usually represented, spoke almost to the dozen, expressing himself with the utmost freedom on every subject brought up. Chancellor Cuno also confided to Mr. Lee, an old personal friend, that he didn't like the political game as much as he formerly enjoyed the business game. Mr. Lee found most German high-ups very worried and unhappy, but extremely determined to hold out against France at any cost.

One of the ablest business men in America sends this letter:

"I am in receipt of the enclosed circular letter from W. C. Durant, who plans to organize a bank and bank to be owned by 200,000 shareholders at $150 a share, which he requests the applicants to send in the form of a check. Nobody appears in it but Durant. Nobody is allowed to own more than one share of stock. The prospectus is an appeal for $45,000,000 capital for a bank that nobody knows anything about and in the establishment of which no mention is mentioned except that of W. C. Durant." What value owning one-three-hundred-thousandth interest in a bank, which appears to be more philanthropic than money-making, is another question which Mr. Durant might like not to answer."

I for one cannot answer. One thing, however, is certain. If Durant should succeed in forming a national bank, he will have to adopt very different methods of compiling his balance sheet from what he has adopted in compiling the balance sheet of his Durant Motors Company. The national bank would not be able to transform some affiliated enterprise, making a contract with it, and then bolster up the value of the capital piece of paper worth $20,000,000 or more. Bank assets have to be something more substantial than simply writing down an agreement on a piece of paper and remarking that the profits arising from the contract in the course of the next twenty years ought to be worth $20,000,000.

On July 4, America will not to see 18 first bank. The fine old Farmers' Loan & Trust Company of New York is celebrating a double abound the Letterbox, which is scheduled to sail on Independence Day. This financial institution recently celebrated its 100th anniversary. Under its new president, James H. Perkins, it is making great progress.

It is comforting to know that Treasury and other bigwigs at Washington feel confident that it is necessary to keep issuing warning after warning against "inflation." My feeling is that one such warning enough and that we were running into danger of approving the broken rails before the train, for example, were becoming quite frightened. Silk manufacturers were becoming timid. So were a good many others.

If only the building mess could be straightened out successfully, if both building materials and building wages could be restored to a reasonable level, the whole nation would be the richer for it. That, I take this is done, the building industry cannot hope to enjoy smooth sailing for very long.

In other directions let us go ahead with energy and confidence and courage.

U. S. Steel Is Driven to New 1923 Low as Stock Market Values Dwindle

STUDEBAKER AT FRESH LOW FOR YEAR

U. S. Steel was driven off over a point to a new 1923 low when renewal of bear attacks in the week-end New York stock market made prices dwindle over a broad list.

New year's lows were also set by Studebaker, Bethlehem Steel, American Can, Cuban Cane Sugar, Mathieson Alkali, National Enameling and U. S. Rubber. U. S. Steel was at its lowest since last July.

On Point was off 7 points. Mack Truck was 2½ lower at 77½. Retail stores and shoemakers yielded points. Stewart Warner dropped 2½ and Sromberg Carburetor 2¾.

Issues off one to 2 points included American Can, American Locomotive, American Woolen, Baldwin, Bethlehem Steel, Crucible, Republic Steel, Sinclair Oil, Studebaker, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Houston Oil, Kelly Springfield Tire, Northern Pacific, Phillips Petroleum, Producers & Refiners, Southern Pacific, U. S. Rubber and Utah Copper.

Penn-Mexico Sugar was one of the few issues to show a small gain. There was a slight rally at the close, but prices ended very near the day's bottoms.

BOSTON BROKERS' MARKET VIEWS

What Boston brokers have to say for the week on the market follows:

It is quite probable that after a further rally of 3 to 5 points, stocks will be a safe again, and from now on be particularly susceptible to good or bad news.—Schirmer, Atherton & Co.

The resumption of aggressive movements by the bear element is proving both surprising and discomforting.—Hunt, Ellis & Co.

We believe, with advent of warmer weather, market will simmer down to trading affair with volume somewhat reduced and no particular price trend in sight. We see nothing in situation, however, to warrant bear move.—F. L. Milliken & Co.

So great a shakeout, together with creation of so important a short interest, ought to induce a condition under which would lead to a reassuring rally and a renewed buying; buying power not only in stocks but in materials.—Tuckey, Anthony & Co.

* * *

We expect to see fluctuations around this level for some months to come, but there is an upward tendency, but it is always well to remember the level is high and too much should not be expected.—Hayden, Stone & Co.

Boston Notes

BROCKTON will receive bids until May 17, for purchase of coupon bonds aggregating $220,000, with maturities in each of years 1924 to 1933 inclusive.

SWANTON VILLAGE, Vt., will receive proposals until May 25, for purchase of 4½ per cent. funding bonds, dated June 1, 1923, and maturing 1924 to 1943 inclusive.

TINKEM Roller Bearing is expected to refer next month either extra distribution or increase in current dividend rate.

BOSTON & Maine is likely to show heavier charges earned and a new record for April revenues.

WALWORTH Manufacturing has succeeded in earning preferred and common dividends for first year to first 1923 quarter.

KENNECOTT Copper earnings of $3.50 a share for initial 1923 quarter shows amount of comeback from 1922 when in full year of 28 cents a share was earned.

RUTLAND and Bangor & Aroostook share honors of being only ones of 19 benefiting New England rails to show balance of railway operating income for March quarter.

VENTURA net current assets are about $3,000,000, or about $5 per share, of which cash amounts to $1,500,000 after paying May dividend.

KENNECOTT Copper earned during first quarter of 1923 $4,595,295 after interest, including Braden Copper Company and rate from Mother Lode, Utah and Nevada. This is at rate of $6.25 a share a year.

The Great Bear Overhead

THE Great Bear ("Big Dipper") is now walking across the top of the zenith about 9:30 p. m. South of the Bear tall (handle of the Dipper), is the double star Cor Carlol (King Charles' Heart), a fine object for a telescope.

The Meaning of El Dorado

EL DORADO means "the gilded man." He was supposed to be a king in South America, whose garments of woven gold he changed daily. The Spaniards searched for him. The term has come to signify a rich region.

THE POPPY PERIL By LAUCHLIN JAMES

An Eye-Opener Romance in Which Is Depicted the Horror of What Drugs do to Hollywood

BEGIN THIS STORY NOW

Two days after Kerry Rowan, a noted motion picture director, had visited the offices of the District Attorney in Los Angeles Rowan is found shot to death in his home, with a bowl of poppies scattered on the floor beside him. Rowan has given much information whereby the drug evil in Hollywood might be attacked and had promised to risk death by testifying against those caught in the raids, for the sake of a clean Hollywood and because of his sincere affection for a young film star. Before this he has visited China and India where he has seen the effect of drugs on men and women both in high and low life. He becomes a movie director at Hollywood, then, and strikes the trail of the poppy again.

The First Poppy Clew

"THE only ones I can think of just now are Pyrrha Chandler and that cake eater she carries around with her. You know—the one who plays the piano."

"Sig Berry?"

"Yes. Those two have been in on every party I ever heard of. Of course, that doesn't prove anything, but I'll tell you what I'll do: I'll nose around a little and ask a few questions. If I find out anything I'll let you know."

Rowan thanked her and, having exacted her promise not to let any one know of his investigation, he went his way.

Through Benny Alton he next got in touch with one of the police reporters on a Los Angeles paper and, on the pretext that he was seeking "atmosphere" for his next picture, he induced that sophisticated young man to pilot him through every resort in the city where he had any idea that "the happy stuff" was obtainable.

The sights Rowan saw on that trip were fit material for a nightmare. In one place he and his guide came upon a man with white hair and ashen face who was mixing a "shot" in the cupped palm of his clawlike hand. When the crystals were dissolved he drew the solution into a syringe and thrust the needle under one of his finger nails.

"Gets quicker action that way," explained the reporter. "His skin is so dried up and tough that it takes him too long to work the stuff through it. Here's another old bandover here. Look at the gag he's using."

Rowan looked and saw a quaking skeleton of a man laboriously manipulating a medicine dropper on the tip of which he had managed to fasten a hollow needle.

"Can't save enough to buy a syringe," said the newspaper man. "Every cent goes for dope. It'll take him fifteen minutes to work that shot into his system."

At the next opium resort Rowan's guider remarked: "There's an oldtimer who's usually hanging around here that I want you to see. Hope he is in. Yep; there he is. Have a look at that gun of his. He doesn't mind showing it."

At Rowan's request, accompanied by some small change, the addict displayed a syringe to the plunger of which he had soldered an old copper two-cent piece.

Revolting Scenes

"Know what that means?" asked the reporter, when the instrument had been returned to its sodden owner. "It means his sense of touch is so far gone that his thumb kept slipping off the plunger. He couldn't shoot the stuff home, see?"

So it went throughout the evening, one hopeless derelict after another submitting to Rowan's scrutiny and his companion's comments with an utter indifference which showed the state of men at apathy at which they had arrived.

In one of the underground Chinatown opium joints, not unlike those Rowan had seen on the Foo Chow Road in Shanghai, except in size, the reporter pointed out a wraith of a woman seated at a table and staring straight ahead of her with eyes that did not move. She was scarcely more than a girl in years, but her visage was that of a crone.

"The last time I was in here," the reporter said, "the guy who runs this place told me that that girl's man had kept her awake for 121 hours on cocaine; kept her out panhandling for him, see? Finally he put her to sleep for a while with morphine, and then started her out again. And they call it 'happy dust'! Can you get it?"

Rowan shuddered. "Let's get out of here," he said.

"All right. We'll go up to Lo Gow's place for a few minutes and call it a night. Lo Gow is supposed to run a harmless Hindoo parlor, but if any one is looking for a supply of dope, I have a sneaking notion that old Lo Gow can dig it up for him."

"Don't the police know about these joints?" asked Rowan.

"Sure, but it's hardly worth their while bothering about them. You can't keep a Chinaman from getting his hop, and if his white brother wants to flirt with the stuff it's regarded as more or less his own lookout, so long as he doesn't interfere with anybody else."

They entered the smoke-filled gambling room and took a seat in an obscure corner from which they could watch the players. They had been seated only a few minutes when Rowan gave vent to a suppressed "Aha!" and relapsed to stuffed his position so that the reporter screened him from sight.

He had seen Sig Berry enter the room, carrying his black case.

Casting a casual glance around the place, the cadaverous performer walked directly over to where the aged proprietor was sitting and entered into a whispered conversation with him. The two retired to an inner room. Presently Berry emerged, paused long enough to light a cigarette, and departed the way he had come.

It was Rowan's first definite clew in the problem confronting him.

The "Cagy" Man.

The next time Sig Berry called on Pyrrha Chandler, his manner conveyed an impression of disquietude.

"Listen," he greeted her abruptly. "Have you ever seen anything that made you think maybe this guy Rowan was getting hep? You know what I mean—about Sinley or any of the rest?"

Pyrrha shook her head. "Why?" she asked.

"Well, it may not mean a thing, but when I walked into Lo Gow's the other night, there was Rowan sitting over in a corner. I made him the minute I opened the door. I never let on I'd rapped to him, but he saw me come in and go out again, that's a cinch. I want to know what he was doing there."

"Looking for local color, maybe," suggested Pyrrha.

"A guy who claims to have lived in China for seven years!"

Pyrrha was lost in thought for a moment. Then she looked up, her eyes anxious.

"You know, you may be right at that," she said. "A man gets awful cagy about the woman he loves. I wouldn't be surprised if that was why I was calmly informed today that when my contract expires next week it will not be renewed.

"Did you ever think Rowan was getting hep?" asked Sig.

That was his work, I'll bet money on it."

Does that mean you'll be out of a job?"

"Don't worry, sweetheart; I'm going to work for the Four Square people. I've got enough on old Stryner to keep me there for life. He's promised me anything I ask if I'll land Cicely Brook for him. I've tried, but the kid is dotty about Rowan. I thought Blair had her going for a while, but the office sent him East to do those New England pictures and he hasn't seen her all Summer. He's back now, though, and making a harder play for her than ever. If I can land her against all that competition, Stryner ought to come across with a new limousine at the very least."

But Sig Berry was not listening. He sat staring into the corner of the room, his lips set in a hard line. Like most crooks he had an animal's sensitiveness to danger. His faculty for profiting by trivial warnings was a form of intuition and the possession of it was one of the things which thus far had kept him out of jail.

"Kid," he broke out, suddenly, "it's a hunch. That guy is on! We've got to watch our step, see? And watch Rowan, too. I wish I knew some one who would trail him for me and see where he goes."

"I know something better than that," said Pyrrha, quickly. "He's looking for a secretary. I heard him speak about it in the lunch room this noon. Why can't we plant some one on him—right in his own home?"

"Who, for instance?"

"I don't know, but there must be somebody we could get." Pyrrha thought a moment, her lower lip drawn between her teeth. Then her face brightened.

"What's the matter with 'Addie' Vaughn? He used to be a stenographer, I think."

Berry reacted her with admiration. "Kid, you're a marvel," he acknowledged. "I'll tell him to be at Rowan's house first thing in the morning."

Adelbert Vaughn was one of the army of "extras" which eked out a precarious existence in the neighborhood of Los Angeles, working now at one studio, now at another, as opportunity or opportunity offers. He was a peculiar young man, with a tendency toward tightly waisted coats and fancy shoes.

Having found congenial associates during the course of his efforts to make a living before the camera, he continued to remain a member of the so-called film colony rather than return to the office work he had quitted, and his living was on modernistic that, in a state of impaired digestion and reckoning perforce, he had become a "client" of Sig Berry's.

Upon receiving the latter's assurance that he would see to the regular allowance of "the stuff" would be shaded a trifle provided he took on the unenviable job, Adelbert readily agreed to make the effort.

"All I want you to do is to keep your eyes open," Sig instructed him. "Just keep track of who this bird talks to on the phone and who he writes to, see? And if he has anything to do with any mail that looks like a dick or a revenue officer, beat it for town and tip me off."

Luck played into the hands of the conspirators the next morning when Vaughn, appearing at Rowan's bungalow, found the director in a great hurry to get to the studio. Contenting himself with a few perfunctory questions and accepting the young man's statement that "some one on the lot" had told him about the situation, Rowan agreed to give him a trial.

In his hasty valuation of the applicant he set him down as a harmless, soft-spoken youth who would do as he was told. Adelbert announced that he would return to town for his clothing and his typewriter, whereat Rowan instructed him to get on the next spare room ready and hurried off to work.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

CHARLOTTE CORDAY STILL HONORED

By Mark Stuyvesant

IT is better that one should die than thousands."

So spoke Charlotte Corday, after she had killed Marat, who called himself "The Friend of the People," but who in reality was a murderous, blood-thirsty creature crazy for power.

There are few more popular portraits than that showing the young French girl, with the soft gray eyes and brown, curling hair falling in graceful waves from under her white lace cap. And today that style of cap or hat is known as a "Charlotte Corday."

Charlotte Corday was of noble birth and lived at Caen. She had been educated in a convent and was a great student. Corneille, the poet and dramatist, was one of her ancestors.

She was steeped in the idea of a republic, through reading "Plutarch's Lives" and the works of Voltaire and Jean Jacques Rousseau.

Charlotte was a strong revolutionist. But she belonged to the Girondists—the party who believed in revolution and a republic, but not at the expense of human blood. To them the Terror was abhorrent.

Marat was the leader of the Terrorists. Charlotte Corday in her girlish reasoning thought that if Marat were done away with the bloodshed would cease.

Without consulting any one and firmly convinced that it was her duty, Charlotte went to Paris and wrote the following letter to Marat:

"Citizen, I have just arrived from Caen. Your love for your native place doubtless makes you desirous of learning the events which have occurred in that part of the republic. I shall call at your residence in about an hour. Have the goodness to receive me and give me a brief interview. I will put you in a condition to render great service to France."

On presenting this letter at Marat's door, she was refused admission. It was only after the third attempt that she finally gained entrance to Marat's house on the pretense of bringing him news of a plot among the Girondists at Caen.

Marat was immersed in a huge copper bath-tub, filled with steaming hot water. This was the only relief he had from a torturing skin disease. He was writing on an improvised desk which rested on the slope of the tub, when Charlotte was ushered in by a servant.

Charlotte quietly made her statement—which in reality was only a ruse to see Marat personally.

Hearing the supposed plot, Marat shrieked:

"Then citizen! They shall be guillotined within a week!"

The words were hardly out of his mouth when this naturally timid, sinking girl stabbed Marat as she shouted:

"My good friends guillotined!"

She thought she was saving hundreds of lives and hoped she, too, would be killed instantly and die unknown, saving her family sorrow and notoriety.

But, although almost torn to pieces by the mob, she was finally imprisoned in L'Abbaye.

Her trial was brief. She was condemned to death, and maintained her calmness to the end.

So composed was she that she spent several hours before her death sitting for her portrait by a young artist named Hauer.

Even before the scaffold, she stood at the foot of the terrible instrument which was to cut short her young life, she was unafraid.

Charlotte Corday thought she was giving her life as the result of a deed which would save thousands of her countrymen.

CHANGING DIET

By Loretto C. Lynch

A Recognized Authority on All Matters Pertaining to Household Management.

ARE you the sort of housewife who serves the pork with lots of gravy several times a week in the Spring just as you did when the thermometer hovered around zero? Yet, if you are not guilty of this error, there are lots who have made no change whatever in the kind of food served the family.

Suppose that instead of the usual heavy Sunday dinner, you plan to serve a cup of fresh asparagus soup, any four fresh vegetables, baked potato, broiled fresh fish, fruit salad and tea or coffee, or for a week-day dinner, plan a cup of clam broth, cream potato, boiled onions, poached eggs on graham toast, baked apples and perhaps molasses cookies.

With a change in the diet like this, the average family will not have to spend many dollars for Spring tonics. For all the tonic one needs may be taken in a pleasant manner in one's food.

However, if a housewife is to get anywhere, she will simply have to plan the meals for several days at least and that on paper. It is not until you write it down and see it in black and white that you realize that you are having potatoes every day instead of breaking the monotony by having savory rice or buttered noodles substituted occasionally.

Vegetables, vegetables and then more vegetables and especially green vegetables should appear in each day's menu. Salads of lettuce, endive, watercress, chicory, romaine and any of the other varieties found in a given locality should be used, a different kind each day so as to get the largest possible variety of mineral salts.

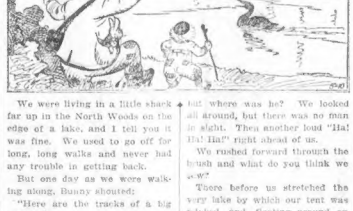
FOXY GRANDPA STORY

HOW A LOON SHOWED THE WAY HOME

SO you say you were laughing like a loon? Do you know what that means?

Lunatic? No, loon of course, dumbbell. But—suppose I'll tell you a story that will show you what you were laughing like.

Bobby, Benny and I were away up in Canada in the Autumn. I had taken my camera along and wanted to get some pictures of the big moose which live up there. I think it's much better to shoot animals with a camera than with bullets, don't you, my dears? And, after all, it's just as much fun.



We were living in a little shack far up in the North Woods on the edge of a lake, and I tell you it was fine. We used to go off for long, long walks and never had any trouble in getting back.

But one day as we were walking along, Bunny shouted:

"Here are the tracks of a big moose!"

Bobby and I examined the ground and, sure enough, there were the footprints. I said:

"Come on, let's follow these and we'll get a fine picture."

So off we started.

On and on we went following the trail of the moose which finally led into some very marshy land.

There, of course, we lost the trail. We floundered around searching for some trace of the moose, but the further we went the worse that swamp became.

With each step we sank deeper and deeper into the soft, spongy, muddy swamp. We couldn't get a foothold. It was getting darker and colder. It wasn't much fun, I can tell you.

It was all right for Bunny, because he was in my pocket, but Bobby's feet and mine were like ice. We were shivering with the cold. I didn't know what to do.

Suddenly we heard, off in the distance, a faint noise that sounded like laughter. I said:

"We must be near a camp. Do you hear that man laughing?"

We stopped and listened.

"Ha! ha! ha!" sounded the laugh. How good it sounded to hear something that meant safety! I took Bobby's hand and exclaimed:

"Come on; let's go and find that man, who must be hearing a good joke."

On we trudged, and all the while the laughter was becoming louder and clearer. We knew we were getting nearer to our jolly neighbor.

Sure enough, the laughter led us out of the swamp and up into the mainland. We made directly for the sound.

"Ha! ha! ha!" Louder and louder grew the laughter.

By this time we expected to run right into the laughing man, but where was he? We looked all around, but there was no man in sight. Then another loud "Ha! Ha! Ha!" right ahead of us.

We rushed forward through the brush and what do you think we saw?

There before us stretched the very lake by which our tent was pitched, and, floating around on the blue surface of the lake, was our laughing friend!

I suppose you think he was a man. But he wasn't. He was a beautiful bird like a duck—a loon—and he was laughing so like a human being that at a distance we thought he was a man.

We followed the border of the lake to our tent. Weren't we glad to get home! I tell you we might have had a pretty hard night in the swamp if that loon hadn't laughed us out of it!

FURNITURE IN HOME

By Marian Moore

PERIOD furniture, with a few well chosen decorative accessories, will create an atmosphere of refinement in the fireproof apartment dining room, with the composition floors and steel doors, as well as in the spacious mansion. Furniture designers have realized that small apartments are here to stay, and the homemaker in the tiniest apartment can now find strictly period furniture in proportion to her rooms.

The walnut buffet illustrated, whose floor runners and carvings denote the Spanish influence, is a part of a dining room suite, formal enough to suit the most exacting. Yet the decorative accessories, consisting of yellow glazed pottery candlesticks and fruit bowl, on pieces of handmade lace, relieve it from any severity. A mirror in carving polychrome frame, with handpainted panels at top and bottom, forms a pleasing contrast.

TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS

A Letter from Mrs. Ward Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Springfield, Ohio. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound proved a splendid medicine for me before my fourth child was born. With the first three I had been very sick and weak, and had sick headaches twice a month. I couldn't keep enough food down to do me any good, and my work was a burden many a time. My sister-in-law told me to take the Vegetable Compound and I began to have the same old dreadful sickness and headaches and was so worn out. Since then I have only had two headaches, had a good appetite and scarcely lost a meal. I have a fine, healthy baby and my sister-in-law had a sick day. The nicest part is that I am healthy, too. It did me a lot of good, and if I should ever have another baby I will take your medicine at once." — Mrs. BESSIE WARD, 1027 Park Avenue, Springfield, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers, and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire system.

THE WAYS OF A HUSBAND—By ANN LISLE

Continuing the Interesting and Intensely Human Adventures of Anne and Jim

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Jim and Anne find happiness again on a honeymoon spent in the apartment of Betty Winston, loaned for the occasion. They go to Dreamwold for a Sunday dinner with Jennie and are met in the grounds by Rosa, who ignores Anne. Rosa advises the discharge of Mabel Storrs to save the big salary. This Anne resents. Evvy helps Anne arrange her apartments and a dinner is given as a housewarming.

By Ann Lisle

"WHERE'S Carl Booth?" she gasped.

"Taking the London office," I replied, knowing that Mabel would accept this without prying. "And it all came so suddenly that they were rushing along on instinct, doing a great lot of promoting here and there and piling a bit of extra work on every one, Mr. Haldane is back at the wheel again, but he needs an able assistant. If I were free there'd be a place for me, knowing that I want it and suggested you."

"How much did you have to tell him about me?" asked Mabel.

"That I believed in your ability. That I'd seen it proved in my husband's office. That you had worked up from bitter and unhappy beginnings, Mabel, I'll give you a vignette of Loren Haldane. He interrupted me there to say that he wanted an assistant, not a chaperone, for his niece. He said your birthplace and social connections couldn't help you much, a piece of good copy or think up ways of getting new advertisers."

"Did you say sponsor," said Mabel thoughtfully. "That would be enough for the man in whose office you spent so many years. He's come to be part of your social life. So, he takes me on trust. That's all right, Anne, as long as I haven't any social life that touches my business existence anywhere. He said it—my goal to be an advertising manager some day, not a chaperone."

"You'll take it?" I asked. "You'll go see him this afternoon?"

"Yes," Mabel replied. "And for your sake, as well as mine, I'll keep my business and personal ledgers entirely separate."

"Except where I'm concerned," I suggested lightly.

"Even there," Mabel replied grimly. "I know Rosa Cardova. I know what she means in Jim's office. I won't let you pay for taking me. But don't look so pitiful. I won't deny myself everything. Well, I'll make it my business to find a few diversions and good times I can, and I'll take them."

There was a reckless quality in her voice. It sounded a note of warning. I wanted to protest. But what was there I could say?

"No getting around it, Anne, we ought to do a bit of entertaining, now that we have a place to stage it," said Jim.

Prowling Around

We'd just finished dinner and Jim was prowling around the living room uneasily. My last remark had been that I hoped Mabel Storrs would be happy in her work at Haldane's and would meet interesting folks who'd help her build up a stable social life.

"You're punning," I said, striving for good humor. "Even if you didn't listen to me or you don't take enough interest to answer."

"I heard you all right," Jim acknowledged. "But you are not thinking. It is so important to you for Mabel Storrs to land in the right set, how about Rosa?"

"Need we worry about Rosa?" I asked, more bitterly than I had intended. "I believe it was of Mabel I was talking."

Jim turned round with the dair in his step which always touches me with its reminder of the big boy he was. Evidently I had startled his somewhat anguish imagination and he purposed to think his way out of the situation to which I'd directed his attention.

"You're saying that Mabel might get herself a chance to build herself a social life—get me going," he explained. "I have sinned. If her brain and qualities appeal to the folks she meets in business and they want to see her outside, I'm the last to begrudge her a chance to live down the Dick West handicap. But we need to know who a girl was before we took her into our homes. And a girl used to know who we were before she came—or went out to dine with us. Chaperone"——

He floundered manifest, since the social world is generally and advisedly left to feminine administration. In a flash I connected up his mental processes.

"You think Rosa has been left to drift?" I said.

"I'll go," said Jim, glad evidently of a moment's respite from what he also probably regarded as an impending scene. He limped out to the nook in the hall where the telephone is located and after a very short time he came back with the face of a thundercloud.

"It's Norreys," he grumbled. "What the deuce does he mean by calling my wife at 9 o'clock at night?"

Tony's message was brief, but insistent. He had something of great importance to talk over with me. It was about Carlotta. It meant everything to them both. And he was counting on me to meet him for lunch tomorrow at one. I couldn't refuse. I didn't, for Tony's tone made me realize that either our friendship was just empty words—or I'd meet him the next day without temporizing.

A Quarrel in Store

"Well, what did Norreys want?" demanded Jim curtly the minute I came back to the living room.

"He asked me to meet him for lunch tomorrow," I answered.

"And are you going?"

Jim's voice was ominous. I steadied myself to reply quietly.

"Yes, I said I'd go. There was something in Tony's voice that made me feel as if I had to. It's about Carlotta he wants to consult me. It isn't a personal matter at all, Jim. It has nothing to do with Tony and me. It's about Carlotta—their happiness——"

"Did he tell you that?" inquired Jim a shade too suavely.

"What he said conveyed it. There's something big at stake."

"Of course, I protested, "don't ask me to give formal dinners or to start meeting folks for awhile. I'm not ready—yet, Father Andrew——"

I stumbled and found I could not go on to remind Jim how short a time it is since my dear adopted father left us forever. But Jim's scowl told me he understood and also that he didn't approve of my attitude. Wearily I wondered if there was a quarrel brewing. I did not want to wrangle or plunge into a discussion. It seemed almost best to override my feelings. I was on the verge of telling Jim so, when the telephone burred out its summons.

"Say, you're a wiz!" cried Jim. "That's it. I'm thinking that Ramon will believe me a poor friend and that you don't know much about hospitality if he sees how small a part we've played in getting Rosa located socially."

"What shall we do?" I sked

"Entertain for her. Give her a bunch of parties. See that she meets the right folks. Don't leave it to chance. How can she know who she's gallivanting around with? Introductions are so darn casual. This town's so big that a girl like Mabel can hope to build herself a brand new group. She my get in right—or wrong, as I can see you're scared she will. But I think Rosa's a more important proposition—more important to my business. And she'll fall for the wrong bunch if we don't steer her to where the right ones gather. Get me, young woman, my dear, as Pat would say?"

"He wouldn't!" I laughed. "But I—get you. And it you think our shrinking, unsophisticated Rosa needs social guiding and training in how to separate sheep from goats will you instruct your very ignorant wife how to go about the education of little Rosa?"

Plenty to Do

"Can the ingenue stuff," sniffed Jim. "We'll give a dinner for twelve next Saturday night. Betty and Ralph, Jeanne and Pat, Tom and Evvy, young Rockhill and his wife. That's a good bunch. And for the twelfth man I'll ask Freddie Waring. I see him at the club now and then. He'll come and he'll reciprocate by introducing you to his family."

"Jim—" I protested, "don't ask me to give formal dinners or to start meeting folks for awhile. I'm not ready—yet, Father Andrew——"

I stumbled and found I could not go on to remind Jim how short a time it is since my dear adopted father left us forever. But Jim's scowl told me he understood and also that he didn't approve of my attitude. Wearily I wondered if there was a quarrel brewing. I did not want to wrangle or plunge into a discussion. It seemed almost best to override my feelings. I was on the verge of telling Jim so, when the telephone burred out its summons.

"I'll go," said Jim, glad evidently of a moment's respite from what he also probably regarded as an impending scene. He limped out to the nook in the hall where the telephone is located and after a very short time he came back with the face of a thundercloud.

"It's Norreys," he grumbled. "What the deuce does he mean by calling my wife at 9 o'clock at night?"

Tony's message was brief, but insistent. He had something of great importance to talk over with me. It was about Carlotta. It meant everything to them both. And he was counting on me to meet him for lunch tomorrow at one. I couldn't refuse. I didn't, for Tony's tone made me realize that either our friendship was just empty words—or I'd meet him the next day without temporizing.

A Quarrel in Store

"Well, what did Norreys want?" demanded Jim curtly the minute I came back to the living room.

"He asked me to meet him for lunch tomorrow," I answered.

"And are you going?"

Jim's voice was ominous. I steadied myself to reply quietly.

"Yes, I said I'd go. There was something in Tony's voice that made me feel as if I had to. It's about Carlotta he wants to consult me. It isn't a personal matter at all, Jim. It has nothing to do with Tony and me. It's about Carlotta—their happiness——"

"Did he tell you that?" inquired Jim a shade too suavely.

"What he said conveyed it. There's something big at stake."

"Of course,
